Exciting spectacle at ringside: Davi vs. Karas

■ High-energy: Candidates with real differences on the issues make for an exciting contest for the 5th District seat.

By PAUL WOLF

LIKE A match between a fierce contender and a scrappy champion, Jeff Davi and Sam Karas duked it out in the first one-on-one debate on the future of Monterey County's 5th District.

Davi, a political newcomer, tended to bolt to the podium as if eagerly entering the ring, knocking around the 4th District incumbent supervisor on his "failed leadership."

But Karas, at the event Tuesday, June 29, always remained standing. He fought back, defending his record, citing his "experience and knowledge," challenging Davi on the gamut of pressing issues, from water to social services.

"I defy you, Jeff, to challenge my record not just on the environment, but on job creation," Karas said, addressing his opponent directly.

Sponsored by the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce, it was one of the most lively debates in recent memory. As they looked toward the Aug. 3 runoff, Davi, a 25-year-old realtor, and Karas, 71, supervisor the past nine years, appeared a study in contrasts.

But, in the auditorium of Robert Down Elementary School, both came across as fighters, each wielding the power of language and rhetoric, and projecting a strong front.

Offensive tactics

Davi jabbed and jabbed — and then did so a bit more. He showed shrewd offensive tactics by pinning varied problems and grievances on Karas' shoulders, everything from the lack of new water supplies, saltwater intrusion and inefficient county services, to poor budget management, illegally collected sales taxesand cuts to public safety services.

If it wasn't always a clean fight, it was the audience, not any official, who would have to make the call. Davi did a good job of sticking board actions to Karas, although occasionally the supervisor cried foul saying he had voted in the minority, as in the case of a key decision on redistricting.

"When the board of supervisors makes a decision, each member must take responsibility," said Davi.

While he threw blows, Karas deflected at least some of them. For example, when the challenger said Karas, who represents the supervisors on the water board, must take the blame for the water district's 16-year record boasting no major water supply projects, Karas had a lightening-fast response:

"I've only been on the water board one year, and I can take credit for lifting the

Gang violence on the rise, law officials warn

By SCOTT BREARTON

GANG VIOLENCE is on the rise in Monterey County, according to top law enforcement officials who spoke at a Carmel Republican Women Federated luncheon Friday, June 25, at the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Addressing the crowd were Monterey County Sheriff Norm Hicks, District Attorney Dean Flippo and Virginia Lovette, assistant to the chief of police of the Richmond Unified School District.

Measure H given first test at planning commission

■ Crazy Shirts' request thrown out because of new 'cap' on number of souvenir shops allowed in town.

By PAUL WOLF

IN REJECTING the establishment of a Crazy Shirts souvenir apparel shop on Ocean Avenue, the Carmel Planning Commission last week applied the new commercial zoning code for the first time.

Meanwhile, the Carmel Planning Department has already received two requests for new art galleries that couldn't have been submitted before the June 8 passage of Measure H.

"It was the first time the planning commission has applied (the provisions of) Measure H," said Acting Planning Director Brian Roseth, referring to the commission meeting Wednesday, June 23.

The commission nixed a request to move Crazy Shirts, on Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets, into the Strawberry Patch commercial space in the same block.

Voting 4-3, commissioners, who had turned down the application before, did not feel assured by the management's promise that the existing Crazy Shirts space would be abandoned.

"If, say, the Nature Co. came here and said they wanted to open another Nature Co. at the other end of the block, I'd be against it," said Commissioner Lindsay

NEW BUDGET OK'D

Council agrees to staff cuts, fee increases

THE CARMEL City Council steered the middle course when adopting its final 1993-94 budget, rejecting two controversial new fees but holding fast to everything else on a long list of new charges and fee increases.

Meeting Thursday, June 24, the council found a way to throw out the 25-cent surcharge on tickets to events in the village, and the landlord's fee — which would have

Helen Dooley's gallery to close after three decades

By SUSAN BECK

HELEN DOOLEY is about to lock the doors to her gallery for the last time.

The Dooley Gallery in Carmel will close July 31 after three decades of providing the public with her powerful watercolor and oil paintings.

"I'm not happy about it," said Dooley. "But I knew it had to close sometime."

The gallery opened in 1964 when she decided to devote herself entirely to painting.

During the years prior, Dooley, a native of Stockton, taught at Scripps College and San Jose State. She was the art supervisor for Kern County Schools, and from 1948 until the time she moved to Carmel, she was a professor at the University of the Pacific in her hometown.

International acclaim

Since opening the gallery, her work has earned national as well as an international reputation. Over the years, said Dooley, her work moved from realistic representational to extreme expressionist.

"My style has changed quite a lot," she noted. "After a while, representational painting became sterile for me."

One of her two favorite paintings is the "Navajo Indian Mother." She was firm when she said, "I wouldn't sell it." The painting is vivid and full of forceful brush strokes. It was inspired while living on a Navajo Indian reservation with her former husband.

Her most favorite, "Montmartre," depicts several people walking in the rain. Up close, the work could be called abstract. But from a distance, all the vibrant colors and clean shapes fuse together into a sense of realism. Dooley always works with bright colors because she said, "they reflect my disposition."

In the living room of her Carmel home, which she designed in 1972, there is another intriguing painting called "Santa Domingo Indian Dancers."

She painted the large canvas in three hours. "My mother and I were renting a room in Taos, N.M., in 1961," said Dooley. "I was inspired to paint at

Letting the people state their case

JUST AS history repeats itself, neighborhood debates over "residential character" recur in every small town that has something worth preserving.

Residents tend to live quietly and privately — only to be roused when their "quality of life" is in jeopardy. Protecting the sanctity of the home is even a stronger impulse than supporting a community's good works.

On Wednesday, June 23, before the Carmel Planning Commission voted to allow the All Saints' Episcopal Church to continue operating its homeless center, a number of residents had concerns about the proximity of such a program.

Would there be panhandling on the front lawn? Might the children be presented with new dangers? Many of these fears turned out to be irrational, or at least unfounded, based on the testimony provided by shelter operators and the fact there has been no incident of the homeless participants causing trouble.

Enter our point. These supposedly "irrelevant" issues led to the information needed for the planning commission to make a good decision.

Numerous times, Chairman Jack Kennedy had instructed the room to stick to the land use issues. Proponents of the shelter spoke ethereally of "Christian behavior," and opponents discussed their fears and the pressures of "political correctness."

But try as he might, the chairman couldn't keep the speakers disciplined. The fact remains: The technical issues are there on behalf of quality of life, not vice-versa.

Remembering Pacific Grove

In a Pacific Grove case some two years ago, speakers went even further afield. It wasn't surprising, since the issue concerned AIDS.

The operation of the Michael Center, a short-lived AIDS support headquarters, was cut short by a PG Planning Commission action in 1991. Residents of the upper Forest Avenue area in PG had complained the center, a program of the John XXIII ministry, was a "quasi-commercial use" in a residential zone.

Because the "relevant" concerns were parking, traffic and noise, opponents had to resort to veiled language. There was a mother, perhaps revealing her prejudices, genuinely concerned about the kinds of people who might enter the neighborhood, but she could only speak vaguely of "the morality issue."

Another speaker said the issue at hand was one of public health, not land use. Sometimes, it appeared as though an enlightened community was bordering on hysteria.

Decision comes harder

In such events, it is harder for a commission to make a decision. Certainly, it is much easier to remain supposedly technical, and decide every case on whether the use is permitted under the general plan and whether "the cumulative impacts are less than significant."

But a planning commission has primarily an interpretive role, and members bring to the panel their own prejudices and philosophies about what is best for the community. If land use were an exact science, we'd leave all decisions to the professional staff.

We believe The Carmel Planning Commission made the right decision in approving the continued operation of the shelter because there was no evidence supporting the notion the overall quality of life was at stake.

But we recognize that even the best of causes must not make a mockery of residential zoning. And in all cases, residents should not be obstructed from deciding what are the relevant issues concerning their own streets.

A sick town

Dear Editor:

There is a sickness spreading in this town. It has got more and more noticeable in the last few years.

Right now, it has reached epidemic proportions. The symptoms of this sickness are a spreading mean-spiritedness, a discourtesy, a nastiness and an inability to tolerate any difference of opinion other than one's own.

All this results in a feeling of fear that one can't express any opinion at all unless one is sure one is in the right group.

If you want to get involved in this town, you had better be prepared to lose a lot of friends... of course, you make a bunch of new ones, naturally their politics must mirror your own.

This has become a sick, mean town. There are a lot of sick, mean, intolerant people here. But, of course, you understand it is the other guy who is sick, intolerant, misguided and just plain mean. It has become a town consisting of "us and them."

If I am a Republican, does my friend who is a Democrat suddenly become my enemy? To be the recipient of threatening letters because her convictions and ideals are not the same as mine?

Would it be normal behavior for me to phone her and make threats? Or write to her and make threats?

I think not. This is not normal behavior — it is hateful behavior. However, this is what is happening in Carmel. I wish we could make up and shape up. Why is everyone so angry? We live in one of the most beautiful little towns in the world.

What is wrong here?

The real Farmers Market

Dear Editor:

Much has been written recently about the "Farmers' Market" in Old Town Salinas. In the past we have seen a lot about the similar market in downtown Monterey.

In the interest of truth in advertising, I feel your readers should be informed that these two markets are not farmers' markets, they are merchants' markets. They were formed by the merchants in the downtowns in the hope that people coming to shop at the market would also shop in the businesses.

The only true certified Farmers' Market is the one that is held on Thursday afternoon at Monterey Peninsula College. Farmers run this market, are on the board of directors, did the growing and are the people waiting on you.

There is no conflict between the merchants' market and the farmers' market; the sellers and buyers are not the same at both. For this reason it is hard to imagine why the downtown market stopped the MPC market from operating the week before Thanksgiving and Christmas. I know I didn't run downtown to shop at their market, I just skipped a week.

I noticed on the KSBW-TV news report of the opening of the Salinas market, that the people interviewed selling the products called themselves "vendors." This probably is truth in advertising.

Go to a real Farmers Market every Thursday from 2:30 to 6 p.m. at MPC and meet the people who grow your food. I have been going for 10 years and the farmers have become friends. It is a wonderful community resource. Long may it prosper!

CARMEL PLANNING COMMISSION

Land issue, or a test of Carmel's compassion?

By PAUL WOLF

PLANNING COMMISSION Chairman Jack Kennedy droned, "Let's stick to the land use issues"

He became less insistent over time. After all, no one was following his instruction.

The topics, Wednesday, June 23, roamed from the plight of the homeless and the economy, to the nature of "Christian behavior" and how safe we should feel in our homes.

The Carmel Planning Commission voted 6-0 to legitimize an existing overnight homeless shelter at the All Saints' Episcopal Church, at Dolores Street and 9th Avenue in Carmel.

"It's difficult to separate the social issues from the technical issues," said Carmel Acting Planning Director Brian Roseth. "And I don't think there was any attempt to divorce the two issues."

Yet the fairly straightforward land use question drew more speakers to this hearing than to any of those focusing on the 1993-94 budget, which was approved the following day, Thursday, June 24.

"This isn't about facts; it's about fears," declared Cy Roseman, the church's senior warden, arguing that the complaints from neighbors about the Interfaith Homeless Emergency Lodging Program were without basis in anything real.

But 9th Avenue resident Bill Sisk complained it was the church supporters who were putting "a social slant, a political slant, on this," not the neighbors — who indeed were concerned about land use. Their question was, How appropriate is this use in a residential neighborhood?

Sisk lamented the community was viewing the shelter through "politically correct glasses," at the expense of residents.

Some speakers acknowledged the worthwhile cause, but complained about the location. Resident and former commissioner Carla Ramsey expressed concern the shelter did not conform to the Carmel General Plan, although City Attorney Don Freeman did not back her interpretation.

The commission's action set a maximum of 20 men for no more than three nights a month. The commission recognized it was setting a precedent for other churches in Carmel.

Churches in residential districts often present great impacts because they are, to use zoning terminology, a "quasi-public" use. All Saints', for example, has

Trip-reduction ordinance to progress to council

By PAUL WOLF

WITHOUT A minute's discussion, the Carmel Planning Commission approved a trip-reduction ordinance (TRO), thereby passing on the proposal to the city council for consideration July 13.

The alacrity of approval Wednesday, June 23, belied the significance of the document — a comprehensive plan to encourage locals and visitors to use their cars less and share rides more.

The commission's approval, noted Acting Planning Director Brian Roseth, "puts us one step further forward."

The TRO has been hammered out over a period of many months and is now in its final form — but apparently not too controversial: No one spoke at the commission's public hearing.

The mandate

All California cities are developing TROs in response to a pair of 1990 state acts aimed at improving traffic congestion and air pollution.

The council is expected to include a public-comment period at its July meeting, and then approve the ordinance on second reading in August. The TRO, according to Roseth, would go into effect this September, 30 days after a second reading.

In general, the ordinance takes a gentle

CUSD agrees on revisions to controversial drug policy

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHILE ADMINISTRATORS are anxious to have a new drug and alcohol policy in place by the beginning of the 1993-94 school year, members of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education agreed June 24 to revise a portion of the proposed policy recently deemed unconstitutional by the ACLU, parents and students.

The policy provision in question would have required students to sign a "written drug/alcohol non-use contract" in order to be eligible to participate in co-curricular activities. In the contract, students agree not to use, possess or be under the influence of any controlling substance at all times, including evenings, weekends, holidays, whether on or off school campuses, during the duration of the activity.

The non-use contract would apply to a myriad of activities, including participation in athletics, student council, cheerleading, music, dance, academic clubs, and all other activities in which students are representing their school.

While most agreed the essence and goals of the non-use contract are worthy, there were serious questions raised about its implications at last week's board meeting. This was the second time the policy has come before the board, having been revised since it was first introduced in May.

"I need to say that this policy has caused me a great deal of thinking and soul-searching," said CUSD board member Patricia Herro. "If I didn't sit on the board I would be extremely offended by this."

Herro questioned how far the district should delve into the private lives of students and asked whether public education should be responsible for dictating public safety.

"I don't think you can mandate children's choices by making them sign an oath," Herro said.

Marvin Biasotti, director of pupil services, was the primary author of the new policy, though many others participated in its revision through the work of a Drug Policy Committee that formed in January.

Out with the old ...

BENBOW DORMITORY, which housed a generation of students at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, was demolished earlier this month by work crews. Built in the 1920s, the dormitory "was a crucial part of life at RLS," according to Frank Keith, the school's director of college placement.

Though there was sadness in witnessing the demolition of the venerable building, Keith said there was much rejoicing in knowing that Benbow's demise makes way for Day Hall, a brand-new dormitory that will greet students for the new school year. Named after Willametta K. Day, an early trustee and strong supporter of RLS, the new dorm will house 58 students and includes four faculty apartments and three common rooms.

The new dorm, one of five on the RLS campus, will officially be dedicated in October. (Cole Thompson photo)

River School parents miffed

CUSD board opts to postpone portable classroom purchase

By SCOTT BREARTON

DESPITE THEIR show of force, parents of River Elementary School children may have to wait for a relocatable classroom they hoped the Carmel Unified School District would purchase to help alleviate space concerns there.

At a CUSD board meeting Thursday, June 24, Superintendent Vance Baldwin indicated the district is not in a financial position to obtain portable classrooms for River and Captain Cooper Elementary schools at present, though he acknowledged he would be willing to work with the board to secure them eventually.

"We don't believe we can financially afford to purchase a relocatable classroom for Captain Cooper School or for River School at this time," Baldwin said. "The fire situation has further complicated the budget picture."

Baldwin said it would cost anywhere from $40,000 to $80,000 for each new relocatable classroom, depending on the amount of site work necessary at the elementary schools.

Jealous climate

Jealousy pervaded last week's meeting, as River School parents compared their facilities with those at Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley. The absence of a computer lab at River School was a definite bone of contention.

Parents cited the portable classroom

Fired teacher's hearing nixed

A PUBLIC arbitration hearing scheduled for today in response to a formal grievance filed by the Carmel Teachers' Association on behalf of a fired elementary school teacher has been canceled.

The grievance charges the Carmel Unified School District did not follow the correct procedure for evaluating a probationary teacher when they terminated Bonnie Clark, a Tularcitos Elementary School teacher, effective June 30. Clark was expected to get a last-minute appeal on Thursday, July 1, in the Carmel Middle School library.

Neither Clark nor CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin would comment on the specific reasons behind the hearing's cancellation, only to confirm that it would not take place.

The dismissal rankled dozens of parents and fellow teachers, who turned out to show their support for Clark, speaking on her behalf at two different school board meetings.

Under state law, the district is not required to give a reason for not offering a new contract to a teacher who is not tenured, and thus has not gone public with the grounds for her dismissal.

Infelise takes MPUSD helm

ROBERT INFELISE has come to the rescue again.

Infelise has accepted the position of interim superintendent for the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, it was announced Tuesday, June 29.

Infelise, 67, served as Carmel Unified School District superintendent from 1985 to 1991. He has been with the debt-ridden Pajaro Valley Unified School District since February, when he took the position of interim superintendent there.

He is expected to begin work with the Monterey Peninsula district July 12, according to MPUSD President Dan Villa. Infelise will serve as acting superintendent for four months while the district is seeking a permanent replacement for Nancy Dalton, who resigned last month under pressure.

104th Anniversary: The Pine Inn is a family tradition

By SUSAN BECK

AFTER 104 years, the Pine Inn in Carmel continues to be a family tradition.

"A lot of people tell me their grandparents and parents brought them here as children," said John Wilson, the inn's manager for the past two years. "The inn never really changes. People like to come back and see the same faces."

Some of the Pine Inn's staff have worked at the inn for more than 30 years, said Wilson. "We have an 80-year-old bartender who has been here for 28 years."

This year marks the 104th anniversary of the opening of the original Pine Inn, known as the Hotel Carmelo, on Ocean Avenue and Broadway, now called Junipero Avenue.

On July 4, 1903, the elegant country style hotel, made from wood out of the old Tivoli Opera House in San Francisco, was moved to its present location on Ocean and Lincoln avenues by Frank Devendorf and Frank Powers.

In the early years, the inn was the social center of the little community by the sea. Shakespeare and poetry readings were held often and the sun parlor was the hub where the events of the day were discussed.

THE ORIGINAL Pine Inn in Carmel, known as the Hotel Carmelo, was located on Ocean Avenue and Broadway, now called Junipero Avenue. It opened in 1889.

French Victorian

The Pine Inn was remodeled in 1941. The overall mood was French Victorian with new additions including 12 shops, garden dining area, rooftop gardens and the Red Parlor pub.

"There are still some customers who have been coming to the bar since it opened," said Wilson.

The two main draws these days are the Sunday brunch and Friday's epicurean feast, not to mention the happy hour in the Red Parlor with free hors d'oeuvres and extremely inexpensive first-class drinks.

Wilson attributes the Pine Inn's continued success to what he believes is the most important thing the hotel can offer — a friendly atmosphere. "My biggest thing is service," he said. "Everyone, no matter what position, has to make the guests feel at home."

That feeling seems to have permeated throughout the tenures of the inn's different owners.

Besides Devendorf and Powers, who sold to John Jordan, an actor and scholar, there were four other owners

CHAPS joins forces with world's largest horse sanctuary

By SUSAN BECK

THE CALIFORNIA Horse Adoption and Protection Society (CHAPS) has formed a working arrangement with Redwings Horse Sanctuary in England, the largest horse sanctuary in the world.

The two-year-old horse protection society will now be called Redwings Horse Sanctuary, said Kathleen Tarp, executive director of the horse shelter on the Point Lobos Ranch property across from Pt. Lobos in Carmel. The arrangement became effective June 25.

"We are honored about the decision to provide us with their experience, support and vision," said Tarp. "We enthusiastically embrace their help."

Redwings was founded by Wendy Valentine in 1984. Last month she was invited to the Grand Opening of the CHAPS Horse Rescue Shelter.

"I was impressed with the work that CHAPS has done," said Valentine, who traveled from Norfolk, England, where more than 1,600 horses, ponies and donkeys reside.

Public support

She said visiting CHAPS reminded her of the work she started nine years ago in England. With 70 rescued horses and no funding, Valentine painstakingly created a home for abused animals. Last year, Redwings raised $5 million from public support.

Redwings in England utilizes more than 1,000 acres yearly on separate farms for the care and rehabilitation of animals, which remain at the sanctuary their entire lives.

There are 150 employees including a full-time veterinarian plus six full-time nurses who look after their residents, rehabilitate new arrivals and work diligently at the vital business of fund raising.

Valentine prefers to purchase land for her animals rather than lease land because it offers more stability. Land is expensive, she acknowledged, however, "If people believe in you, they will make donations to help."

The two main goals of Redwings is educating the public's awareness about abused animals and raising enough money to buy land.

Foster care

"I don't believe in adopting out," said Valentine. "I believe in foster care in order to make sure the animals are always in good hands. People's situations change, but horses don't."

Experience shows that many horses suffer due to ignorance rather than deliberate neglect, she added. "It is heart-

Bark beetle survey deemed successful

FRIENDS OF Carmel Forest, along with eight full-time and part-time city employees, identified 161 trees on public land that were infested with the deadly pine bark beetle.

Walking every street in Carmel on June 23, the event signified the most comprehensive tree survey for bark beetles ever conducted in Carmel, according to Clayton Anderson, volunteer project chairperson.

City Forester Gary Kelly said, "It was one of the most productive and significant volunteer efforts I have ever seen — a project that couldn't have been accomplished by city staff alone."

"We will follow up immediately and should be able to eradicate 75 percent of the infestation," Kelly continued. "Getting that many people out was terrific and the education process will be beneficial throughout the year."

Green ribbons were tacked onto infested trees. Eradication of the beetles is scheduled to take place this month.

Since the survey covered only public trees, Friends of Carmel Forest encouraged residents to inspect their private trees for possible signs of bark beetle infestation.

Residents desiring confirmation of suspected beetle infestation and help with eradication should contact Friends of Carmel Forest at 624-3208 or 624-7022.

Highs and lows of holding public office

By Barbara Livingston

EVERY DAY at least one person stops me on the street to ask: "How do you enjoy being a council person?" That question elicits a variety of responses depending upon the particular day it is asked. My responses range from "I really enjoy it" to "Well, sometimes I wonder why I do it."

The more complete answer is that I have felt rewarded by getting to know so many residents and business people. I have felt greatly honored to have been elected to the council of this town I have loved for so many years.

Also, I would answer that I have appreciated the many telephone calls and letters from the citizens of Carmel. And I have welcomed the ideas and opinions offered to me each Wednesday at the Village Corner.

Mutual respect

Finally, I would say that no matter how I vote on various issues, I hope that the citizens and I will maintain our mutual respect.

Beyond that answer, I want to mention an aspect of holding public office that has been a great disappointment to me. That is the lack of civility expressed by a few members of our community.

There is always a danger that we might say something that is not exactly correct or not as we would have expressed ourselves had we had more time to think. What is most important is that we all have it within our power to make corrections, to say we are sorry, to extend a courteous handshake. There is never any need to be mean-spirited or to refuse to acknowledge error.

I was pleased to see how council member Bob Fischer recently gave us all an example of how to be fair-minded, even big-hearted.

Because of misinformation printed in The Carmel Sun, there could have been an unfortunate confrontation between Councilman Fischer and Clayton Anderson. When the facts were known, Bob Fischer put out his hand and said "Clayton, let's start over." That is what is known as civility, an act of public politeness.

Actually, Bob Fischer and Clayton Anderson are both to be congratulated — Clayton for persisting and insisting that the original story be corrected, Bob for listening and offering his hand to show that he both heard and understood.

About Carmel Commentary

The views expressed in "Carmel Commentary" are those solely of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Carmel Pine Cone.

What if this one handshake could be multiplied throughout the town? Handshakes, cordial greetings, friendly smiles would do a lot to heal the pain and acrimony in Carmel. When we lose our civility, our courtesy, our politeness toward one another, it is not pleasant or productive.

The other day I received a telephone call that exemplifies what can happen if we lose our civility. This phone call was at worst a direct death threat, and at its least, a hate call. And it was anonymous. Why didn't that person have the intestinal fortitude to identify herself and tell me her concerns?

'The other day I received a telephone call that exemplifies what can happen if we lose our civility. This phone call was at worst a direct death threat, and at its least, a hate call. And it was anonymous.'

That's the way to get things done in a positive and civil way. Having the passion of belief and conviction is appropriate; striking out in anger and hate is not. Shame on that person and others like her who are attempting to create a climate of fear so that people are afraid to express thoughts that are different from the intimidators.

All citizens have the right to their beliefs and opinions. But equally important, we must all feel free — and safe — to disagree with each other!

That freedom and safety are the foundations of out country.

has ever faced is presently confronting them. It is the fiscal crisis brought about by the state taking large chunks of county property taxes that rightly belong to the county.

Whoever wins the 5th District Supervisor election on Aug. 3 will have to immediately deal with this on-going complex crisis. There will be no time for on-the-job training.

If Jeff Davi should be our new supervisor, he would need on-the-job training. Lots of it. He has not held elective office or a meaningful appointed office. He has no government experience. Being 25 years old, he has not yet had time. Most important he does not know who the players are.

In contrast, Sam Karas is on top of the county's fiscal crisis and is doing something about it now. For example, he and Supervisor Tom Perkins are proposing three actions:

- an urgency ordinance ordering the county treasurer to use 1991-92 formulas in disbursing property taxes.
- ordering the county legal department to draw up a ballot measure for the Nov. 2 election to "give citizens an opportunity to oppose or support the state's taking of their property taxes."
- directing the county legal department to challenge the state mandated property tax shifts.

Vote for continued experience and maturity. It has never been needed more than right now. Vote for Sam Karas on Aug. 3.

Carmel notes July 4 restrictions on fireworks

WITH THE July 4 holiday coming into view, Carmel Police Department reminds revelers about the fireworks ban and restrictions on alcohol consumption and beach fires.

"No fireworks of any kinds — including 'safe and sane' — will be permitted in the city limits," says an announcement.

Additionally, the use of alcoholic beverages by persons 21 years of age and over will be permitted on the beach only until 10 p.m.

Regarding fires, these guidelines apply:

• Beach fires will be allowed until 10 p.m. and no fires will be allowed north of 10th St. or above the high tide line.

• Burnable material used in fires cannot extend more than two feet above the fire's base; flames cannot extend into the air more than five feet from the base of the burnable material.

• "No fire shall be built, lit or maintained within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible material not intended to be used in the fire."

Meanwhile, Carmel City Hall listed temporary traffic changes adopted by city council for July 4:

• Scenic Rd. will be one-way northbound beginning at its southernmost point within the city and extending to its intersection with Santa Lucia.

• Santa Lucia St. — One-way eastbound from its westernmost point to the intersection with Carmelo St. Traffic shall remain two-way east of its intersection with Carmelo. Traffic westbound on Santa Lucia shall be diverted north- or southbound on Carmelo.

"No parking" rules apply this way:

• Santa Lucia St. — Both sides beginning at Camino Real and extending to Scenic Rd.

• Scenic Rd. — Both sides for the entire length between Ocean Ave. and Martin Way.

• San Antonio St. — East side from Santa Lucia to the north city limits.

• 13th Ave. — Both sides from Scenic to Carmelo.

• 8th Ave. — Both sides from Scenic to Camino Real.

• Ocean Ave. — Both sides from Scenic to Camino Real.

These streets shall be closed to all vehicular traffic other than vehicles belonging to those who live on the streets (resident-owned vehicles must be parked off the public right of way):

• Scenic Rd. — South of Ocean Ave. to Santa Lucia.

• Ocean Ave. — West of its intersection with San Antonio.

• 8th Ave. — West of its intersection with San Antonio.

• 13th Ave. — West of its intersection with San Antonio.

Finally, State Department of Parks says Carmel River State Beach parking lot will be closed at sunset ("approximately 8:30 p.m.") on July 4. The beach will be closed at 9 p.m. that date.

Monterey Peninsula gets dose of smog

By SUSAN BECK

IT WAS smog — not fog — on the Monterey Peninsula's horizon last week.

An air quality monitoring station in Carmel Valley registered a violation around the air basin, Thursday June 24, said Tom Manheim, public affairs officer for the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District. The air basin includes Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

A violation is registered when heat bakes trapped pollutants which covert to smog, said Manheim.

Meteorologist Robert Renard's records show that June 24 had a high of 90 degrees. However, the record breaker was Friday, June 25. It was 97 degrees.

Manheim said 50 percent of the basin's smog comes from traffic. The other half is a mix of industrial sources.

Last year, he said, there were 11 violation days within the air basin. However, he added, none of them were in Carmel Valley.

This year, he noted, there already has been three violations. "We didn't expect to see violations this early," said Manheim. Usually, the violations occur in the summer months. He said smog is typically a "summer problem."

Road closures scheduled

TWO UTILITY improvement projects are scheduled for Carmel within the next three months.

Improvements will be made to the city's sewer and drainage systems in conjunction with construction of the new Carmel Area Wastewater District and Pebble Community Services District Wastewater Reclamation.

The work will begin at the end of June near Rio Park between Rio Road and the Carmel River. It will then be routed to Lasuen Drive, Dolores Street, 15th, and Carmelo Street concluding at 2nd Avenue past Ocean and Fourth avenues by Oct. 1. Work hours are scheduled for weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Carmel Public Works at 624-3543.

Drug policy revisions coming

"What concerns me is the long-arm approach (regarding co-curricular activities)," Biasotti said, who noted that a separate subcommittee worked on that portion of the policy.

Biasotti said he's still unsure about whether or not the non-use contract will be kept in the revised policy.

"We still don't know that it's not legal," he said. "We're waiting for a response from our attorney as to whether or not it's legally defensible.

"I'm convinced that we will need to make some additions to provide individual safeguards if we elect to keep that section of the policy," Biasotti noted.

Fred Herro, an attorney and husband of the board member, shared his concerns and made some suggestions to the board.

Fred Herro was critical of a portion of the policy which directs coaches and administrators to discuss allegations regarding violations of the non-use contract with students. In the revised version, the word "rumors" was replaced with "allegations."

"We felt that the word 'rumor' was just too loaded," Biasotti said. "We tried to use a word that was more neutral."

But the change in wording wasn't enough to convince Fred Herro of its constitutionality.

"I would really suggest caution in terms of the process," he said. "You don't want to create a situation where false accusations can be made easily.

"What substantiates an allegation?" asked Fred Herro. "If you don't have a standard for measuring that, you're headed for disaster."

Biasotti acknowledged that "there are no standards in the policy for substantiating allegations, other than a confession."

'Privelege, not a right'

Local parent Jim Kistenmacher said that participation in co-curricular activities is a privilege, not a right.

"The law has already said those things are illegal," Kistenmacher said.

Sandy Wise, a Carmel parent, agreed. "Kids in leadership are doing things that are illegal," she said, suggesting that lawyers could be hired by the district to address any breaches of constitutional law contained in the policy.

"We just want to provide a healthier environment for our kids to grow," Wise added.

Janet Myer, Carmel parent and founder of Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA), shared her thoughts about the issue: "Whatever policy the school board puts into place should be not only enforceable, but enforced," she said, suggesting the current athletic code at Carmel High School has not been rigorously enforced by coaches.

Myer has been a strong proponent of developing a district-wide drug and alcohol policy that sends students a clear non-use message.

Biasotti agreed to go back to the drawing board for that portion of the policy regarding co-curricular activities, with the goal of presenting the entire policy for adoption by September.

"I think we'll have many of our questions answered by our own (legal) counsel," Biasotti said.

CUSD board postpones planned purchase of portable classrooms recently approved for Tularcitos, to house the school's music program. But CUSD Assistant Superintendent Rosemary Montgomery explained that the portable was merely a replacement for one that was loaned to the district from the neighboring community center.

"We don't have a computer lab," said River School parent Nate Danielson. "We want it. We want an equitable solution for all our children."

'In the 1990s to not have a computer lab is just insanity.'

— Ernie Lostrom

Likewise, Ernie Lostrom, a commercial real estate agent and parent, referred to the "real need for space" at River School.

"One classroom will make it work for us," Lostrom said. "In the 1990s to not have a computer lab is just insanity."

Lostrom said the River School PTA is capable of raising sufficient funds for computer hardware, but they need a place to put it.

"There's a lot of ways to attack this, but we need your help," Lostrom continued. "If it gets bumped tonight (off the agenda) it's going to dampen people's spirits."

School Facilities Task Force chairman Jim Kistenmacher said space problems at River School could have been alleviated by going to a morning and afternoon kindergarten schedule, as Tularcitos will for the 1993-94 school year.

"The staff at River School was unwilling to go to a.m./p.m. kindergarten," Kistenmacher said. "That's my recollection."

But River School Principal Sharon Douglass said it wasn't just the staff's choice: "It was not in the best interests of the children to go to an a.m./p.m. program at River School," she said.

Obtaining portable classrooms at Captain Cooper and River schools were but two of the six recommendations presented to the board by the district's School Facilities Task Force, which has met numerous times since its formation late last year.

The task force steering committee recommended that:

- A cost analysis be completed on the feasibility of renovating and enlarging River School.
- "Phase II" of the Enshallah study be implemented for the purpose of further exploring the feasibility of selling River Elementary School and building a new elementary school with the proceeds.
- A morning and afternoon kindergarten program be established at Tularcitos for the 1993-94 school year only, to provide a short-term, temporary solution to space needs. An additional kindergarten teacher would need to be hired by the district, at an estimated cost of $35,000. A long-term solution will be sought for the 1994-95 school year.
- A relocatable classroom (with bathrooms) be purchased or leased, at a cost of approximately $75,000.
- A relocatable classroom be purchased or leased for River Elementary School, at an estimated cost of $40,000.
- Priority be given to Captain Cooper Elementary School in the event the district cannot afford to provide portable classrooms at both schools.

Board member Gary Gray suggested that parents should be willing to compromise. "The door isn't slammed shut," Gray said.

With that said, Gray made a motion to "direct the administration to implement all the recommendations in the order they appear, depending on the availability of funds."

The board approved the motion 5-0.

Budget adopted

come in the form of a business license issued to the renters of residential and commercial properties.

The council was able to delete the two by doubling the amount of the new fee on tour bus parking, from $5 to $10.

Voting unanimously, the council approved the budget before its July 1 deadline.

Other new or increased fees that will go into effect concern everything from filing an appeal (from $100 to $200) to having one's dog transported to the SPCA (free to $31).

Council members had seen much opposition to the renters fee and the admissions charge. Many in the community regarded the two revenue-increasing strategies as more akin to taxes than fees. Technically speaking, fees are designed merely to cover the costs of services not generally covered by taxes, such as police and fire.

California cities suddenly have found themselves in the position of relying more on their own revenues as they are losing money to the state, which last year began drawing liberally from property taxes.

Yet some residents, speaking at the public hearing before council action, were troubled by the package of new fees and increases.

"I think we should be honest and recognize these are taxes," said Louis Rolle. "We are doing now what the state has not had the guts to do."

City administrator Jere Kersnar noted that, regardless of the actions of the state legislature, the city is behind in matching fees with actual costs. Therefore, it is justified in imposing the new and adjusted fees.

"The extent to which you are not covering the actual costs of your services is the amount the general taxpayer must subsidize that service," Kersnar told the council.

It was the proverbial rock and hard place. Council members didn't wish to raise fees any more than they wanted to cut more positions.

No further cuts would be possible only by insuring that $286,000 in new and increased fees would be projected for the 1993-94 budget.

At an earlier budget meeting, held June 11, the council agreed to reduce the labor force by five full-time personnel, thereby introducing the second year in a row of staff cuts. The positions set for elimination are:

- Two police officers.
- A fire prevention officer.
- A personnel assistant
- The children's librarian at the Harrison Memorial Library.

At the June 11 meeting, the council had been able to spare the positions of the head gardener, the animal control officer and the recreation director by rejecting Kersnar's plan to give a 4 percent raise to all the remaining employees. The council froze wages.

At the June 24 meeting, the council agreed saving the fire prevention officer was the highest priority in the event that the state's "theft" of city funds, as Mayor Ken White put it, will not be as bad as projected.

More information on the state's takeaways should be available by mid- or late July.

For the 1993-94 budget, Kersnar projected a relatively conservative 24 percent for the state's diversion of property taxes — to the tune of roughly $300,000 for Carmel.

The city administrator has reported the governor's budget calls for a 22 percent taking. Should more money become available later in the summer, the council will reconvene to check its options, White said.

Council members agreed to join other cities in fighting the state — and potentially defying it as well. Council members said they would consider not releasing its property taxes. They will discuss that possibility further at their regularly scheduled July 13 meeting.

(The Monterey County Board of Supervisors, on Tuesday, June 29, agreed 5-0 to withhold their property taxes, potentially inviting a lawsuit in the process.)

The landlord's fee was to treat all rentals as businesses. Owners of both residences and commercial space would have had to pay $15 for a business license, and pay an annual fee of 1 percent of "total gross revenues."

The proposal was quite unpopular among both council members and the citizenry.

Although the administration had only $39,000 from the landlord's fee in the budget, the charge offered the potential in the coming years to bring in at least $100,000 each year, according to Kersnar.

The admissions fee, which would have tacked a quarter onto the price of a movie, concert or other event, has been unpopular since Kersnar first proposed it in May.

Measure H undergoes initial test at planning commission

Hanna.

Measure H, the rezoning proposal, squeaked by 1,099 votes to 1,088 in the June 8 election. The new code, among other things, expands the central-commercial district (CC), streamlines the permit process for new uses and puts a "numerical limit" on certain kinds of "intensive" commercial uses.

The vote on the Crazy Shirts application and the new applications to the planning department show how the new code in some ways liberalizes Carmel's commercial zoning and in other ways makes conditions stricter.

The Mainland Co., which manages Crazy Shirts, is hoping to wind down the business it operates, Strawberry Patch, located two storefronts to the west. Its request — which may be appealed for a second time to the city council — is to use the larger commercial space for the Crazy Shirts.

Steve Moder, Mainland Co. president and the lessee, told the commission the move would constitute a "consolidation," an actual reduction in overall sales area. He had difficulty convincing commissioners of this point.

Moder attempted to assure commissioners the current Crazy Shirts space would not be used for another souvenir apparel business. But commissioners were not prepared to rely on promises.

In addition, Moder argued that Strawberry Patch has operated as an apparel store with only a minor portion of its stock dedicated to souvenir items. Commissioners, however, put the most credence in the planning staff's records, which indicate the Strawberry Patch has in fact focused mainly on place-name retailing.

Finally, the commission voted 4-3 (with Chairman Jack Kennedy, Carl Livingston and Ed Jordan dissenting) not to allow the move. Because there was no binding assurance that the Crazy Shirts use would not be abandoned, a majority of commissioners believed they would be exceeding the cap of 10 souvenir shops.

Two galleries

The two applications for new art galleries received by the planning department are both located in the newly expanded central-commercial zone. Neither required commission approval, according to Roseth.

They are: The Gibson Gallery of Animation, in the Leidig property, at the corner of San Carlos Street and 7th Avenue, in a space formerly occupied by Knuffels; and the Carlson Gallery, located on 7th between Dolores and Lincoln streets.

In the service-commercial zone they occupied before June 8, the two new businesses would not have been permitted.

Helen Dooley's gallery set to close after three decades

9 a.m. We had to get out by noon. Sometimes being in a hurry makes a painting come out better. It bothers me that some people think if I paint too fast, it's not worth much."

Fortunately for Dooley, that view isn't shared by others as was evident in 1972 — her best year. "It's amazing how many paintings were sold," she said, adding that pricing is purely guesswork.

Dooley sold her first painting for $10 to a girlfriend's aunt when she was in high school. Today, her paintings are worth thousands of dollars.

Reluctant change

Even though she knows it's time for a change, she is reluctant. "It will be terrible not going to the gallery."

Throughout July, Dooley's work will be on display. The doors of her gallery may close forever, but her work will continue. She is currently working with a long-time artist friend, Louis la Barbera, on putting together a book of her paintings and marketing her work.

Dooley is slightly apprehensive about putting her work in another gallery. "My work is so different from most of the work in town. Besides, it will be difficult for me to ask if they would exhibit my work — after all I've been through."

HELEN DOOLEY'S second favorite painting "Navajo Indian Mother."

Daltons building first house at Quail Meadows; ready by April

By SUSAN BECK

ED AND DONNA Dalton of Carmel are building the first-ever house at Quail Meadows in Carmel Valley.

The couple expects their new home will be finished by April.

It took 15 years for Ed Haber, president and one of the owners of Quail Lodge, to make the 56-lot development on 614 acres a reality.

"It's a long awaited day," said Haber at the ground-breaking ceremony held for the Daltons last weekend.

Lawson Little, a vice president at Quail Lodge, said there will be three or four houses under construction this year. "It symbolizes putting people back to work. There are some happy faces out here."

Dalton, an orthopedic surgeon, has lived in Carmel for the past 25 years. His wife is from Hawaii and has lived here for nine years.

"This is the best development around," said Dalton. "My wife and I came up here before any of the construction got started. I knew if Mr. Haber was involved, it would all be done in good taste. They have exceeded our expectations."

Sheriff John Burke has been keeping valley's peace for 20 years

By SUSAN BECK

JOHN BURKE has a great beat.

For the past 20 years he has traveled an easy 100 miles a night in Carmel Valley watching out for the community.

JOHN BURKE

Burke is a Monterey County Deputy Sheriff, and his valley beat is one of six on the Monterey Peninsula.

Four 10-hour days a week, Burke spends the majority of his time cursing from Rancho San Carlos Road to Cahoon Summit at the 32-mile marker on Carmel Valley Road up to Cachagua and Tassajara and back down again over the Los Laureles Grade to Highway 68.

"It's the next largest beat next to Big Sur," said Burke. The other sheriff beats are Pebble Beach, Highway 68, unincorporated Carmel and unincorporated Monterey to Laguna Seca.

"There are four guys for six beats," he added, "and all the beats converge at Rio Road and Highway 1, which is why you see all of us there at one time."

Burke considers himself a rural deputy sheriff. The Carmel Valley area still has a lot of second and third generation families, he said. "I've watched people grow up, and now I'm dealing with their children. I get a lot of 'hey, you know my dad.'"

Criminal activity

Criminal activity in Carmel Valley has not fluctuated that much over the years, said Burke. "The people who live in the valley are really aware of what is going on. If we get a call, that usually means something has happened. People seem to be a little more tolerant of situations here than in other areas."

The two major crimes are thefts and burglaries, the latter defined as a crime of theft involving force, said Burke. Fifty percent of the crime is committed by locals and the other half by outsiders, he noted. "And, it goes in spurts, usually every three years after the criminals are let out of prison."

Burke is particularly fond of his involvement with the Monterey County Sheriff's Search and Rescue Team. He has worked with the team for 19 years and is the team's leader. "I run the show. If they need me, I go."

The most frustrating part of his job is the paper work. He said the state requires a record of everything from child abuse to AIDS-related deaths. "It's easy work, but time-consuming," said Burke. "But it's important to have the records put on the books."

Because of the increased public and educational awareness in today's society, Burke said he believes children are "a little sharper these days."

He said getting the information out through the school system is a vital crime preventative measure because, "around here, you don't learn things on the streets."

Overall, Burke thinks the situation in Carmel Valley is relatively mild compared to other places. "I have a lot of friends out there, and I spend a lot of time talking with people in the valley."

> 'My philosophy is to fight fire with fire, but I'm not going out there looking for it. Who wants to fight?'
> — Sheriff John Burke

As for the occasional hostile confrontations, Burke said the best recourse is for one to talk their way out of it rather than fight. "It's potentially dangerous to go into a situation with blazing guns. It's better to do things calmly. My philosophy is to fight fire with fire, but I'm not going out there looking for it. Who wants to fight?" Besides, he pointed out, "it takes forever to get a uniform shirt replaced."

More seriously, he said, "there's no backup. We either slow down or speed up to coordinate our arrival with another officer at the scene."

The sheriff's office is in hard times, said Burke, because of the recent financial cutbacks on staff. He said the deputies count on the community being the eyes and ears for them. "We need people to keep us posted."

Burke keeps his cool head, by keeping an open mind. "Not everything is etched in granite. Sometimes there's a reason for things. Communication is the key, talk to people and keep the avenues open, and stay away from trouble."

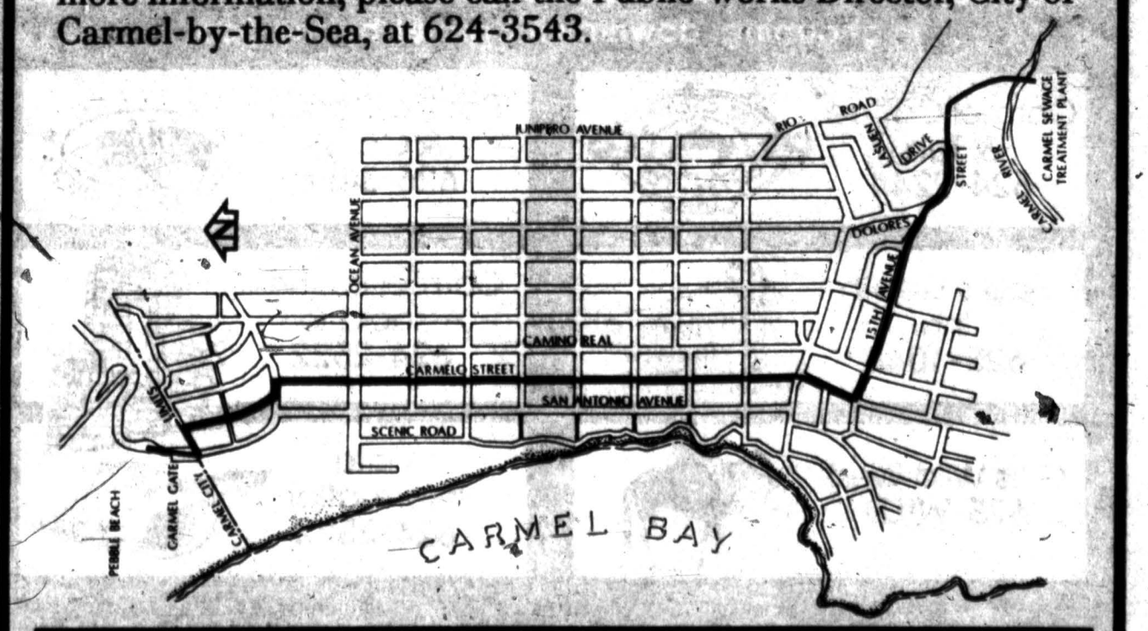
PLEASE PARDON THE INCONVENIENCE

Between July 1 and September 30, projects to improve the City's sewer and drainage system, and to install pipes for the Wastewater Reclamation Project, will be in progress within the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea and immediately adjacent county areas to the south of the City near the Carmel Mission.

Work will necessitate temporary closure of streets to through traffic in some areas, and temporary detours to divert traffic onto and from other streets in several other areas. The map below shows the route of the road work to be done.

If you have any questions or concerns or would simply like more information, please call the Public Works Director, City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, at 624-3543.



Thank you for your understanding and patience.

Gang violence burgeoning

"In Monterey County right now, there are no areas that are gang-free," Hicks said. "We have a major problem and I hope we can solve it before it gets out of hand."

Salinas Valley has the most gang activity in the county, according to Hicks, with some 12 different gangs made up of approximately 200 members.

But the problem isn't limited to the Salinas Valley, according to Hicks. He said graffiti and other tell-tale signs of gang activity are evident throughout Monterey County – from Bradley to Carmel Valley and beyond.

While the number of juvenile arrests and drug-related crimes in Monterey County has decreased significantly during the past several years, according to Hicks, the number of people arrested for committing violent crimes increased by nearly 50 percent during the same period.

Statewide, Hicks said violent crimes committed by "youthful offenders" increased by 17.3 percent from 1986 to 1991. From 1980 to 1990, violent crimes committed by juveniles involved in gangs have increased nearly 400 percent in California, according to Hicks.

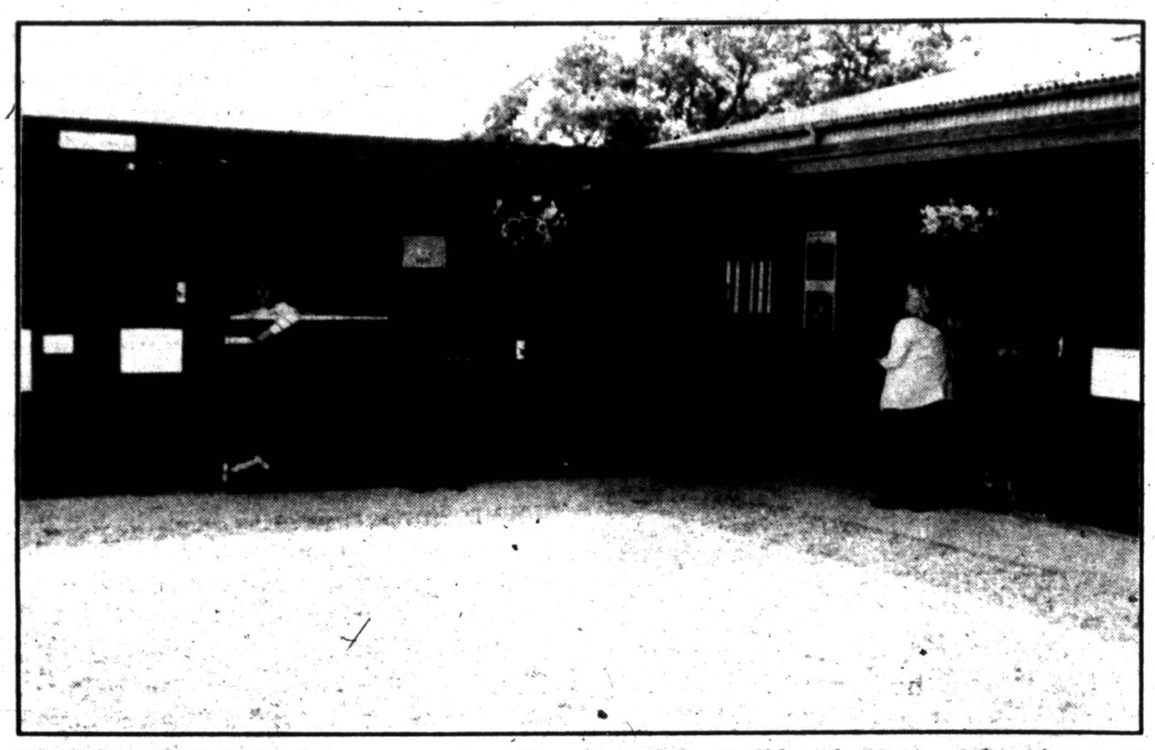
rending to see animals who have suffered, but it is rewarding to watch them regain their health and confidence and form social groups within the sanctuary."

Amy Moss, president of CHAPS board of directors, said "They have offered to give us some of their time and money for the next two years in order to help us expand our base of public support and number of animals that we can rescue. We are thrilled about it."

Valentine will be visiting the Point Lobos Ranch horse sanctuary periodically during the next two years to oversee the operation and offer continued support and knowledge, said Moss.

She said CHAPS hopes to stay at the Point Lobos Ranch for as long as possible because it's the ideal place for educational programs and for the public to visit.



KATHLEEN TARP, right, executive director of the California Horse Adoption and Protection Society (CHAPS) visited the Redwings Horse Sanctuary in England last month.

Alvarez, Higgerson guide thriving business into 10th year

By SUSAN BECK

TWO ENERGETIC women, Judy Higgerson and Margarite Alvarez, are celebrating their 10th anniversary in business.

Country Home Care in Carmel was started a decade ago with a specific goal in mind: To provide every possible option for elderly people to choose in-home care rather than living in a nursing or convalescent home.

With 17 years of experience as a registered nurse, Higgerson realized there was a need for home care on the Monterey Peninsula. "I worked as a certified nursing assistant for 10 years — I knew everyday that my patients were not getting enough care."

Alvarez was selling health care for Merrill Lynch when her 81-year-old father became too ill to take care of himself. "That's when I realized most of the people in nursing homes need not be in there."

The two discussed the possibilities, decided to give it a try and with $1,500 each, they opened a 170-square foot office part-time. There was one desk, two chairs and an endless supply of calling cards.

Believing there is virtually nothing that can't be done at home that is done in a convalescent home, Higgerson and Alvarez set out to become one of the leading home care providers in the area.

Today, Country Home Care operates the largest nurses' registry in Monterey County. In addition, they run a Country Residential Care in Carmel Valley, and a fully licensed home health agency serving Medicare and insurance clients. In addition to the administrative offices in Carmel and Salinas, a new Monterey office has been added.

Both agree their success is in part due to being "in the right place, at the right time."

Since it has been difficult to succeed in business anywhere during the last several years, the key to their growing business is the shared philosophy that if it isn't the very best, it isn't good enough.

"My greatest fear is mediocrity," said Alvarez. "I couldn't live with it."

In 1986, the California Association of Personnel Consultants awarded Alvarez for her exemplary work in legislation efforts to upgrade home health care regulations in the California. She was on the Natividad Hospital Advisory Board and chairperson for the nurses' Registry Act Review.

She is also a member of more than a dozen organizations, and in 1989, she was awarded the Monterey Peninsula Small Business Award for Excellence.

Higgerson is equally as active. Like her partner, she belongs to dozen organizations. She received the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce Small Business Excellence Award in 1989. She was also given the Mildred Brockman Fellowship Award for promotion of fellowship in 1980 and 1981.

At present, both women are nurturing a cause to promote the free-enterprise system rather than a national health care plan.

Their frustration in administering the government-sponsored Medicare program to clients has set their course of action.

"Medicare is a loser," said Alvarez. "At best you might break even. Medicare charges $68 for one nurse's visit to a client's home. I can provide the same service for $20."

Higgerson said that every day they are forced to place band-aids on problems and indignities suffered by out clients.

As the president of the League of Women Voters in Monterey County, she is researching the health care systems world-wide in an effort to find workable solutions. "Solving the nation's health care problem is not a bureaucratic exercise."

Country Home Care expands management staff

By SUSAN BECK

MARGARITE ALVAREZ and Judy Higgerson, co-owners of Country Home Care Home Health Agency, are expanding their management staff.

Carolyn Fryson has been hired for the agency's Medicare division. John H. O'Brien has been named director of case management and Sharon Brown has joined the firm as staff coordinator for the private care division.

Fryson is the new office manager for the Medicare division. She has 20 years experience in managing medical offices and is a lifelong Monterey Peninsula resident.

Fryson works with a majority of doctors on the peninsula and in the Salinas Valley.

O'Brien was the director for Cresscare, a local home care firm. He received degrees from the University of Santa Cruz in psychology and psychobiology and served as director of senior supportive services at Alliance on Aging for two years before working at Cresscare.

Prior to that time, O'Brien was the program supervisor at Rehabilitation Mental Health Services Inc., where he provided professional and program administration.

Brown, a native of Pacific Grove, recently worked in marketing division of CTB McGraw Hill. Her healthcare experience includes certification as a nurses' assistant and licensed emergency medical technician. She currently is pursuing a counseling credential.

Country Home Care is a fully licensed home health agency with administrative offices in Carmel, Monterey and Salinas.

Carmel couple celebrates 60th wedding anniversary

A CARMEL couple celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary last week.

Byron B. and Bonna M. Simpson, who also recently celebrated their 89th birthdays, were married June 24, 1933 in Fresno, where they were involved in business and ranching until retiring to Carmel in 1967.

Mr. Simpson, a native of Mt. Etna, Iowa, met his wife at a ballroom dancing class conducted by his sister, Margaret S. White, who later established a residence in Carmel.

Mrs. Simpson, a native of Osage Mills, Ark., grew up in the Fresno area.

Many of the first houses in the American colonies were built from bricks used as ballast in the holds of ships.

HEARING FACT NO.4

Eighteen million other Americans have the same problem.

More persons suffer with the loss of hearing than from diabetes, high blood pressureand arthritis combined. So, although you are special, your difficulty is not.
Yes. It is frustrating. Sometimes we get angry or depressed. But, hearing loss is not terminal. Be sure your Family Practice Physician knows about your hearing loss — however through surgery, medicine or from a hearing aid. If medicine or surgery is not your answer, you may benefit from a hearing aid. One of those new advanced, miniature hearing instruments that more and more people are wearing.

Call today for a hearing evaluation and check-up.

programs virtually every day, presenting an continuous impact on traffic and parking.

"That's why I felt we could narrow it down to the issues of noise, traffic and density," said Commissioner John Thodos.

Thodos, an architect by trade, regarded the decision as offering a "left-brain" and a "right-brain" approach. "The right side of my brain was sympathetic to the cause, but my left side was looking at the issues."

Like the others on the panel, Thodos concluded the impacts of an occasional vanload of people — whether homeless or not — would be insignificant.

For opponents, the issue was as much neighborhood character and "quality of life" as a land use question.

Ramsey expressed concerns about property values. Sisk spoke of his "fear of answering the door, fear of panhandling." One mother expressed concern for the safety of her children.

Commissioners stressed there was no record of any significant incident of disruption.

In fact, there were a number of testimonials in behalf of the good manners and decency of the program's participants.

Had the commission determined the program presented unacceptable impacts on the neighborhood, the news would have spread quickly through the media, and people everywhere would have had yet another opportunity to view Carmel, in resident Jim Holliday's words, as an "elitist oasis" — insulated the problems of modern life.

By the commission's vote, the city may have escaped such a branding. Even if commissioners were able to consider only the land use issues, it is clear everyone else was not taking so limited a view of their decision.

Trip reduction plan OK'd

rather than strong-arm approach to getting people to change driving ways. Residents, merchants and city workers can expect few mandatory requirements, according to Roseth.

"The whole approach for the first couple of years will be voluntary," Roseth said. "This is really mainly a public relations and education process."

For starters, with the adoption of a TRO, the Transportation Agency for the Monterey County will conduct a survey of business owners, including those in Carmel, to gather information on employee driving habits and "commute patterns."

The hope is to increase interest in and awareness about the ride-sharing network organized by the Association of Bay Area Governments (AMBAG).

Those who, say, work in Carmel but live in Marina, or Del Rey Oaks, can share rides if their schedules mesh. Carmel city employees, too, will be encouraged to carpool.

"Each department will be treated like a business," Roseth said.

The ordinance includes provisions to make developers take trip-reduction measures, whether designating parking spaces for carpoolers or including racks for bicycles.

Motels and inns will be asked to keep on hand Monterey-Salinas Transit bus schedules, and Roseth said there may be mandatory compliance.

"We are going to ask them to put them in there, and we will, if we have to, go around and make sure they did so," he said.

"But we expect people will see the advantages of doing this."

Thank You
Pebble Beach Area

RESIDENTS, EMPLOYEES, VISITORS, AND NEIGHBORS FOR YOUR PATIENCE AND COOPERATION

Over the past few months, we know that you have been inconvenienced by detours, streets being closed, equipment and trucks in residential areas, and other minor problems that can occur during a construction project.

We appreciate that you have been willing to take extra time and energy to be pleasant and understanding. We also appreciate your part in helping us make the Wastewater Reclamation Project a reality that will ultimately be of benefit to everyone on the Peninsula.

Most of the road work is now complete in the Del Monte Forest. The roadways along the pipeline route will soon be paved and restriped. During the summer, we will be working in the area of Robert Louis Stevenson School to install a pumping station and a storage tank.

You have been terrific. We could not have completed this work so quickly without your cooperation. Thank you!

Menaces run amok at park picnic

"HEY, MR. WIL-L-LSON!" Dennis shouts as the camera zooms in on his whirling bicycle wheels, playing cards slapping the spokes, cans clapping behind.

This was the opening scene of the new hit movie "Dennis the Menace." And those of us lucky enough to attend the movie benefit screening and party, hosted by the Monterey County Film Commission last week, were the very first in the county to see it.

Little blonde heads were bobbing above the seats at Galaxy 6 Cinema while parents herded droves of kids through the aisles. One man, so exhausted from coralling kids at the preceding picnic, simply pulled his straw hat over his eyes, slumped in his chair, and slept through the whole movie.

The fun-filled benefit started with a fabulous picnic at Dennis the Menace Park in Monterey. There were families from every sector of the county hopping from hot dogs to hamburgers to chips and tostadas and around to the Dreyer's ice cream bars. It was a food free-for-all and happy faces abounded!

Chris Harris, director of Chartwell School, one of the agencies that benefitted from the event, was seen at the veggie/fruit table loading up on watermelon, fresh pineapple, jicama, green peppers. "I feel guilty eating kid food," he said. "I don't like feeling guilty." So after indulging in kid food he ate adult food.

Picnickers lined up to buy T-shirts and Menace souvenirs, with sales bnefitting Chartwell School, The Boys and Girls Club of the Monterey Peninsula and All Saints' Day School And the Menaces quartet from Monterey High School played on.

Unbeknownst to many people, the world renowned cartoonist Hank Ketcham lives right here in Carmel. And one mother blushed as Ketcham took her son, Scot Winby, onto his lap for a picture.

The park, formerly a dump site, was built by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees in 1954. And, according to Ketcham, it continued to be a dump site. "That was in the old days where mom dumped the kids and went shopping for a couple hours. I don't know if they still do that."

Ketcham, red-faced and grinning with joy to see so many enjoying his park, said he never gets a chance to use the equipment. It's always too crowded.

With kids swarming the real locomotive in the park, sun melting my face and ice cream, and balloons popping behind me like rifle shots, I was beginning to feel as crabby as good ol' Mr. Wilson. About that time I ran into Ed Crankshaw who had just won the Mr. Wilson look-alike contest.

"I'm as ornery as Mr. Wilson," he said. And his son, Kenneth Crankshaw, verified it.

The park was a sea of Ray Bans, big brimmed hats, cowboy clothes, Hawaiian shirts and, mostly, tow-headed tots all vying for a hand-signed hand-painted cartoon from Ketcham.

Matthew Long, who won the distinction, was a dead ringer for the menace. Suited in a striped T-shirt and bibbed jeans with a sling shot in the back pocket, he flashed a grin and confessed to being a menace to his mom. "I break lots of things," he said. "Once I broke a pot with a flower in it."

Several moms admitted they have menacing sons. Karen Nordstrand, assistant director of the film commission, which benefitted from ticket sales, said her five-year-old son, Erik, could pass for Dennis easily. However, she couldn't enter him into the contest because she's on the commission.

And Karen and Sam Head said their three-year-old son, Jonathan, had just created a messy Play-Dough extravaganza on their carpet before they came to the picnic.

I wondered how the poor little boy who walked around in a huge Dennis costume was faring in the heat. From inside a huge papier mâché head, I heard the faint whisper of Margaret Camara, "It's hot in here!"

The Jaycees put their blood, sweat and tears into this event. Joy Junsay, former Jaycees president, was pouring A&W root beer and proud to say that they built the park and procured the fishing boat on which the children were playing.

Harris was pleased with the turnout and said the monies they raise will be used to get their students "things they can get their fists into... something Dennis would approve of."

Around 7 p.m., busses shuttled party-goers to the movie house where we streamed into the two screening rooms. Parents were counting heads, doling out popcorn, and shouting at little Dennises who didn't behave.

To add to the mayhem, it was a scorching night and the theater's cooling system must have blown its circuits. After an hour and a half, with hundreds of bodies in the room, some of us were fanning ourselves with the programs to keep from expiring.

My main criticism of the movie is that it's not the pure PG rating it touts. Hughes seems to have a fixation with crotches. In "Home Alone," the victim/burglars are constantly being injured in their privates. And the same is true of Matthau.

See SPOTLIGHT page 21

AT THE Dennis the Menace benefit party and movie premier, look-alike contest winners Cranky Mr. Wilson (actually, Ed Crankshaw, or should I say Cranky-shaw?) hoists the devious Dennis (actually, Matthew Long) to his shoulder. Mr. Wilson looks characteristically chagrined. (All photos by Chris Hulse)

HANK KETCHAM is almost overshadowed by a menacing, live volunteer dressed in little boy's dungarees. They are joined by star struck Jacqualin Starr, who asked the famous cartoonist for his autograph.

MARTIN BARRETT, executive director of the Monterey Peninsula Boys and Girls Club, wife, Kathie, and son, JoJo, sold souvenirs to benefit the club.

BRIDGET HILDEBRAND and Alison Kerr, Chartwell School volunteers, look like seasoned sales girls during the picnic.

LUCKY FOR the American Red Cross Carmel-by-the-Sea chapter, it was a gorgeous evening at Quail Meadows for their annual meeting. Mayor Ken White, who asked a pithy question during Elizabeth Dole's lecture (read the column to see!), chats with Red Cross stalwarts Marjorie Timmons and Jean White before the dinner.

Also, the film opens with light little vignettes, true to the comic strip. But a grimy protagonist, portrayed perfectly, lurks throughout the second half. This is not something I've ever seen in the comic strip, but I guess Hollywood thinks it's necessary to hold the attention of their younger viewers.

But do go see it. It's a dear little movie. Nick Castle, whose credits include the touching, "The Boy who could Fly," directed this film. And when he did, he really got down with the "spiders and kneecaps and hubcaps," as quoted to me recently by Ketcham.

Ever ready Red Cross volunteers recognized

The sun had just dissolved, leaving a peach blush over the rolling hillsides at Quail Meadows, in Carmel Valley, a week ago Wednesday evening. I had just attended the Red Cross annual recognition and awards reception, with guest speaker Elizabeth Dole, president of the national organization, and driven to a hill overlooking the tent where guests were still asking questions and finishing their fabulous desserts. The moon was a sliver and lights from the tent glimmered in the duck pond.

It was one of those times when life seemed incongruous. Dole had injected some heart-rending stories about her visit to a Red Cross field hospital in Somalia where she saw people so malnourished their skin was translucent. The hospital had been under fire and handicapped children lay in their beds, with bullet holes above their heads.

"I have great respect for Red Crossers who would put themselves in harm's way there," she said. She had actually gotten there riding in a jeep with a machine gun atop it.

Then I reflected upon the dinner... There stood Dole, in a fashionable silk dress, pretty and charming enough to be a Miss America contestant. So far away from the floods, fires, earthquakes, AIDS epidemic and starvation the Red Cross deals with daily around the world.

Here we all were, safe and sound at one of the most beautiful places on earth... I felt guilty.

But I remembered another thought I had while watching the lineup of volunteers and staff receive their awards. My thought was that behind the tinsel of these fancy soirees, volunteers of every hue and station in life roll up their sleeves to help others in need. And I felt a little better. Anyway, the event was fabulous and such people as Robert Kohn, a member of disaster services, agreed with me that Dole should be president.

Mayor Ken White asked a pithy question: in this time of budget cutting what has the Red Cross done about it? And Dole's incisive answer was thorough enough to convince any skeptic.

LAURIE SCHUMANN, disaster chairwoman, presents an award to Jeffrey Lach, disaster specialist. Few guests knew that when he isn't volunteering, his business is dressing in red diapers playing Cupid for special occasions.

THE LOVELY Elizabeth Dole, president of the American Red Cross, listened raptly to her interviewers, along with Lynette Balesteri, Carmel chapter manager.

GERALD AND Jo Barton opened their lovely Big Sur home for A Fashion Extravaganza to benefit Legal Services for Seniors last week. During the fashion show lawyer Chris Hyland (left) modeled an outfit for board member Martha Mosher and Betty Bryant, volunteer lawyer.

BOARD MEMBERS and event co-chairs Roberta Huntington and Marion Robotti admired the outfit modelled by Allegra Bukogeniaky.

Lynn Davis (right), executive director for the agency, and a snazzy dresser, poses with his wife, Lydia.

Understanding Golf

By JANET COLES

LOWER YOUR scores immediately: Learn to control speed on long putts.

If you have trouble getting long putts close to the hole, check your stroke as well as green reading techniques.

The longer the putt, the greater the chance it will involve multiple breaks, wet or dry spots, variations in grass thickness or changing grain patterns.

All such conditions will affect the ball's behavior, which is the reason you should walk off long putts, as well as assess each putt from behind the ball. Pacing the distance on a long putt can help develop a feel for the "weight" of the stroke you will need to get the ball to the hole.

Check your stroke. Trying to force the putterhead to swing harder or faster to hit the ball farther is a sure way to misalign both its path and its face at impact.

If this is your tendency, try controlling distance (or speed) by the size or length of your backstroke rather than the force of the hit.

Try the ladder drill: Hit your first putt five feet, then the next putt five feet past that, the next, five feet past...until you build a ladder with five balls at five feet increments. This will teach you distance and speed control on long putts.

Carmel's Pine Inn turns 104

prior to 1921, said Wilson. After that, the inn had only four owners in 72 years.

The hotel was purchased by Harrison Godwin after World War II. He sold to Carroll McKee, who died June 21. He believed in high occupancy, said Wilson. "The rooms were $49 a night for almost 25 years."

The new owner since 1986, Richard Gunner, raised the room fees, but not substantially, said Wilson. "The rooms are still a real value."

Max Davis from Honolulu is refurbishing the Pine Inn, which encompasses an entire city block. The Terrace Room and the Red Parlor are finished, and all but five rooms have been redecorated. The rooms are once again elegantly country with French fabrics of Pierre Deux and armoires that are reminders of a bygone era.

Wilson said it is a unique experience working in a hotel that has so much history. He especially enjoys meeting people from all over the world.

The Pine Inn may be a constant, but the never-ending inconsistencies of his job is what hold's Wilson's interest. "My biggest challenge is the plumbing. You never know what you are going to find when you start fixing the pipes."

JOHN WILSON, manager of the Pine Inn, said the inn will be completely remodeled in three to four years. (Susan Beck photo)

Holiday safety

THE FOURTH of July is a time for celebration — for family get-togethers, picnics on the beach, lots of fun and laughter. But the hustle and bustle can be upsetting to your pet, and the added stress of fireworks can make a basket-case out of your precious four-legger. Remember to consider your pet's safety and well-being over the holiday weekend. Here are a few tips:

•If you're planning a barbecue, your guests should know that Fido just might visit each of them looking for a hand-out and wind up with a big tummy-ache! Be sure your pet isn't overfed or over-stimulated by your guests.

•Your pets won't understand that the loud noises and sudden bursts of light are all part of the fun. Be absolutely certain that your pet is safely confined during the evening hours. A mild tranquilizer, prescribed by your veterinarian, will help to calm a nervous dog or cat. Severe stress can cause disease problems just as it can in people.

•If you will be away for the holiday, please bring any outdoor pets inside to a quiet, protected area.

•Be sure your pet is wearing identification tags. A collar with your name and address and an up-to-date license from your local animal control department can help get your pet home safely.

Have a safe and happy Fourth and be sure that your pet does, too. It all depends on you!

Home again

It's been almost two years since the devastating fire in Oakland and many family pets were killed or lost when they ran from the flames. Three determined pet lovers organized the Firestorm Pet Hotline to help reunite pet owners with their precious Best Friends and recently, 20 months after the fire, two pets were returned to their families.

DJ, a ginger Manx/Persian cat, was locked inside a house that was destroyed by the fire. His owners searched for him for six months but since they'd sadly found just one cat claw amid the ruins of their home, they thought DJ had been killed. Then, two months ago, they got a call from the Firestorm Pet Hotline saying that a stray being fed by a woman just a few blocks away appeared to match DJ's description. Imagine the family's astonishment when they found it was indeed DJ! But after spending 18 months trying to survive, DJ was wild and it took another eight weeks before he could be coaxed into a cat carrier. After a week at home, DJ seemed at ease and in fact, his attitude was even better than before. He used to be independent and quite haughty but now, according to his delighted family, he's loving and so affectionate, it's incredible.

Timothy, a Chihuahua, was also reunited with his owner after being found near an Oakland park. Thanks to the dedication of the pet hotline volunteers, these rescues were possible and their efforts continue to search for firestorm survivors. We thank them for all that they've done to help the four-legged victims of this disastrous fire.

Bye for now. See you next week.

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

Warning! Hot weather is here!

Leaving your pet in a parked car can be a deadly mistake. On a warm day - even if it is only 80 degrees - the temperature inside a car, with the windows cracked, will reach over 100 degrees in 10 minutes and 120 degrees in 30 minutes. Your pet cannot tolerate such temperatures. They do not have the means to cool themselves like we do. They use the air around them, by panting, to cool their body temperature. Do your pets a favor, and leave them at home when the temperature rises. Remember...the sun does move, and if your car was in the shade when you left...it may not be when you get back!!

In addition, the city of Monterey even agreed to match each donation dollar for dollar up to $17,500.

Frank Lichtanski, MST general manager said, "Continued community support is essential for this program to succeed. Even though we have viable program, we are still in need of long term funding." The WAVE offers residents and visitors a convenient and efficient transportation along main waterfront destinations including downtown Monterey, the Conference Center, Fisherman's Wharf, Cannery Row, the Aquarium and major hotels.

BEWARE ILLEGAL FIREWORKS

If you see fireworks being sold out the back of pickups or car trunks, they are illegal and dangerous.

These types of illegal fireworks, which typically fly, explode or shoot fireballs, are very dangerous and cause many wildfires, injuries to children and house fires.

The California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection suggests that if you witness these illegal fireworks sales, get the license number of the vehicle, a description of the vehicle and of its occupants. Then call 911 and pass on the information. This simple move could prevent many fires and injuries. Let's be fire safe in 1993.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

People who track retiree trends report a strengthening of the tendency to "stay put" rather than move away. Back in 1980, Census Bureau data showed that 75 percent of retirees stayed on in their own homes. About 20 percent moved within their home state and four percent moved out of state. A 1990 survey found that 84 percent of those over 55 prefer to "stay in my own home and never move." Another trend: A tendency of older retirees, mostly over 75, to leave out-of-state retirement communities to enter assisted-living or nursing home facilities closer to children and grandchildren.

Supervisorial candidates slug it out moratorium (on new water connections)," Karas said.

The supervisor could also counterpunch.

When Davi assumed the role as the watchdog for those who oppose tax-and-spend government, Karas banked on the experience he can offer but Davi cannot, saying, "Government is not run like business. You can't believe the hoops you must jump through."

Karas also had the effect of making Davi seem naive, correcting his opponent that the Monterey County Film Commission — which Karas was instrumental in creating — was not a "humanitarian" endeavor, as Davi called it, but a "humanities" undertaking. The mixup was likely just a slip of the tongue on Davi's part.

Voter registration deadline July 6

THE DEADLINE for registering to vote for the Aug. 3 Monterey County supervisorial election is July 6.

Citizens may register in person at the election department, 1370 B, South Main St., in Salinas. Or they may pick up registration forms at various city halls and libraries throughout the county.

For those who wish to have forms mailed to their homes, call the elections department at 647-7621.

Scoring points

Davi scored points in creative ways. He didn't just talk about a grand jury report criticizing the county's management of Natividad Medical Center. He held up the document for the audience's benefit.

Displaying an observable political polish, Davi turned his minuses into pluses. When he was asked about his support of the film commission, for example, he didn't know what he should have — whether the program has been turning a profit. So he simply asked Karas. The supervisor said yes, and Davi made hay out of it. "See (looking at Karas), that's how you know it's worthwhile. If it is turning a profit, I don't have a problem with it."

Karas should have taken the point for himself. But he was strong where he needed to be. He emphasized his role in saving the Defense Language Institute. He spoke eloquently on the need to keep tourism healthy because the hospitality trade creates jobs.

Moreover, Karas spoke compassionately on the subject of the homeless, noting it is easy to declare that public safety should never be cut at the expense of social services. "I get calls from people — someone saying, 'I have four children in the car. Mr. Karas, what can I do?"

With a larger contingent of Davi supporters on hand, the venue was in his favor. But applause was loud for both candidates. Whatever happens election day some five weeks hence, residents of the 5th District can expect some hard-hitting rounds.

Gang violence becoming county-wide problem

Monterey County has about 63,000 students in all, according to Hicks, with about 14,000 of those attending schools on the peninsula. The two largest school districts are North County with 4,873 students, and Carmel Unified, with 2,253.

"To say that we live on an island and we're not going to be affected – I think we're just burying our heads in the sand," Hicks said, indicating there are ways to combat the problem.

Early intervention

Early intervention is key, according to Hicks, who praised efforts to teach children about the pressures of gangs and drugs before they learn about it through peer pressure or experimentation.

"We need to build self-esteem and make sure they understand why they shouldn't be involved in gangs."

In addition, Hicks said more officers are needed on the streets, community involvement is essential and parents should be held more responsible for the actions of their children.

Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo cited some alarming statistics as well, noting an 88 percent increase in violent crimes committed by juveniles during a one-year period, from 1991 to 1992.

"Times have changed in the last few years," Flippo said. "We have broken every homicide record in this county right now.

"We've already had a murder on our school campuses, and we've already had a teacher shot in the schools – right in the halls of North Salinas High School."

Flippo argued that violent juveniles should be prosecuted as adults, and vowed to crack down on truancy in the county.

"It's going to be very difficult for us to overcome without an outpouring of commitment from our community, from our citizens," Flippo noted, adding that there must be a partnership forged between the community and its schools.

"The greatest future that we have is our children. We owe them, morally, the right to be safe in the schools."

'Permissive society'

Flippo said part of the problem is rooted in our "permissive society," which has become increasingly numb to violence. He said this is due, in part, to television programming and genres of music that glorify violent acts and downplay their effects.

"Studies now show that a child, before puberty, will see about 17,000 to 18,000 acts of violence on TV," Flippo said, urging citizens to speak out against violence in the media. "Go to the purveyors of this type of information."

"We are in a crisis period, and that crisis period, unfortunately, is dollar-driven," Flippo concluded. "We have so many services and needs, that we are no longer capable of meeting all the demands on government, all the real needs of the population."

Lovette helps police the Richmond Unified School District (RUSD), with its 30,000 students. RUSD has its own police force, composed of 13 academy-trained officers.

"There's a contrast, of course, between Richmond –where I come from – and Carmel and Pebble Beach," Lovette said. "I think the contrast is very obvious. Our crime rate is very high," she stated, noting that Richmond has the highest crime rate in the nation for a city its size.

In Richmond's schools, crime is a way of life, according to Lovette. Crimes run the gamut, including battery, assault, rape, extortion, weapons concealment, gang-involvement and even homicide.

"You have to see it to believe it's really out there," Lovette said. "I hope it never comes here to Carmel or Pebble Beach."

A sign of the times?

The efforts taken to combat the problem in Richmond include:

- Two uniformed, armed policemen patrol every district campus daily.
- All campuses are closed.
- Teachers, administrators, students and visitors must wear identification badges, to distinguish themselves from outsiders who may wander onto campus seeking trouble.
- Metal detectors – both hand-held and and walk-through types – will be installed at all high schools by Sept. 1.
- Lunch is catered at Richmond's high schools by fast food restaurants such as McDonald's, Taco Bell and Round Table Pizza.
- Entertainment is provided on campus as another means of discouraging students from leaving campus. Video games are available, and special music and sports programs are scheduled during lunch hour.

These changes are indicative of the means by which many public schools are attempting to deal with violence.

It may be a sign of the times, or perhaps a sign of things to come at Monterey County schools.

Monterey Bay Blues Fest enters realm of magic

Deanna Bogart sat on stage apron to chat with fans.

Aaron Neville: His vocals occupy a rare plane.

By JOHN DETRO

WHERE NEXT can a music festival go when everyone agrees upfront that it has achieved world class status?

Monterey Bay Blues Fest (MBBF) addressed the attractive problem last weekend by creating contexts in which magic could flourish and delight party-bright crowds.

This eighth annual bash was a commercial as well as artistic success. Business manager Bob Massaro put the total number of tickets sold (arena and grounds admission) at 27,000 — 3,000 above last year's count.

The magic came on strongest when those Neville Brothers from New Orleans capped the Saturday afternoon show. Superlatives seem weak. All 7,000 of us in the arena were taken high — transported — by the intensity and sheer beauty of their Soul Cajun Rockabilly Gospel Blues.

Treating humanity as one family and meaning the unitive approach, the Nevilles updated Let My People Go to include Malcolm X, Pastor King and today's children who are being slain in the streets. Folks around me wept openly; everyone swayed and many chanted along — the motion and sound of belief.

Burly Aaron Neville sang like an angel. In my listening experience, only Milton Nascimento from Brazil occupies the same rare plane. Poet and jazz broadcaster David Gitin observed: "These men are the American band; they incorporate and advance so many influences."

Blissful face

Some of the other magical moments:

• Deanna ("born to boogie") Bogart sat on the main stage apron and chatted blissfully with applauding fans. Her excellent keyboard, tenor sax and vocal work were but part of the story. Her mother and mother-in-law had flown in (from Phoenix and Baltimore respectively) — and Deanna told friends that she and her husband, Nick, would welcome their first child in about five months.

Later, she inaugurated MBBF's use of the ancillary Night Club. Power vocalist Barbara Morrison sat in, and the two women tore it up. "She's a killer," Deanna said of Barbara. "I'm writing a song for her. We're talking about going on tour together."

• Responding to what the crowd gave him, B.B. King broke out beyond his blues-giant-as-marketed-package stance. He actually sat down and played some intimate, deeply moving guitar. Back at the dressing room, he asked to meet soul singer Clarence Carter, and the two men spent quite some time chatting as if they were old pals.

Lee Durley of the MBBF board appreciated King's mellowness. "He signed an autograph for my daughter, Addie, and took more than five minutes in nice conversation with her."

• Vocalist Dorothy Moore wept backstage over the arena's crowds great appreciation of her dramatic set. On Sunday evening, Etta James was her saucy, booty-shaking self after MBBF gave her its first Monterey Bay Blues Artist of the Year Award.

• Oakland's Webb Sisters sent hearts soaring with their Garden Stage gospel set first thing Sunday morning. The four ladies even got off into a medievil antiphon with African-American verve.

• The Blues and Jazz Youth Chorus out of Seaside's Oldemeyer Center (youngsters from 4-12 years old) were even more impressive than they were last year. This time they sang one tune which they'd written together. Themes: rain and homelessness. Congratulations to Director Bill Allison and those who've provided support (MBBF included).

Women's presence

Festival programming also made a gesture to the super macho blues world. Blues women came front and center with full force — Lady Bianca, Sista Monica, Bogart, Morrison, Moore, Etta, the great Ruth Brown, Webbs, Sacramento singer Arbess Williams as the Saturday Night Club closer. As always, Arbess amazed those who didn't know her work and pleased those who did.

Nathan Williams and the Zydeco Cha Chas came in with a long and refreshing set. Arena dancers responded to the Bayou partytime sounds.

The Garden Stage talent level was much better than fair. The Duke Jethro Band from San Jose could play any blues venue on the planet — Duke (Hammond B3 Organ), tenorman Rob Suddoth, Sammy Verello (guitar), Karl Karter (drums).

Jethro vocalist Nate Pruitt sounded like a cross between Lee Durley on the gig and classic jazzman King Pleasure. This whole crew will be back for Monterey Jazz Festival in September.

"The people are happy and so we're happy," said MBBF board member Will Wallace. "Everything came off better than we had hoped. Next year? Maybe 1993 will be hard to beat, but we'll do our best to keep on growing. The leadership feels really positive."

The use of four MCs made for variety. San Francisco radio personality Ray Taliaferro (main stage) and the Garden Stage's Buddy Lowe (gospel and blues

Happy birthday, America!

By JOHN DETRO

AMERICANS ALWAYS have been energetic people. And when we celebrate Independence Day — well, you can count on a whole lot of activity.

Here's a rundown on area plans for the special period:

Fort Ord

"A spectacular fireworks display will paint the sky with splashes of brilliant colors over the main parade field at 9 p.m. on July 4," says a public information writer with holiday spirit and a certain literary flair intact.

Additionally, free entertainment will be provided throughout the afternoon as Bobby Burns and the Bounty Hunters play country music from 4-6 p.m. A disc jockey will spin tunes from 6-8 p.m. — and the Seventh Infantry Division (Light) Band will perform at 8 p.m.

Food and beverages will be available. For youngsters, there will be pony rides.

The Fort Ord gates will be open to the public from 4-11 p.m. Those planning to attend the fireworks display are "encouraged to come early" since "parking is limited."

From 4-7 p.m., 30-minute tours of the installation will be given to anyone so desiring (children must be accompanied by an adult). Questions will be answered about plans for the Presidio of Monterey Annex, division deactivation, environmental cleanup and post closure. Tour buses will leave the parade field parking lot every 15 minutes.

Fort Ord calls this get-together its Last Hurrah.

Monterey

The nearby city will host its annual flag raising and kick-off parade downtown at 10 a.m. July 4.

The parade route starts at the Safeway parking lot on Munras Ave. and continues on Alvarado toward Del Monte. Among participants will be Rear Admiral Thomas Mercer (grand marshal), Seventh Infantry Division (Light) Band, El Mariachi

Sunday summer songs — lovely program offered

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

IN A well nigh idyllic setting, a program of Summer Songs for a Sunday Afternoon was offered by soprano Mary Margaret Graham. The event was sponsored by Friends of La Mirada, a volunteer organization dedicated to supporting the historic Castro-Work home and its gardens.

Picture this: a gracious and spacious drawing room with classically elegant furnishings, providing an atmosphere wonderfully conducive to the enjoyment of a particularly well chosen and appropriate group of songs; bright, sunny, perfect weather; a patio banked in colorful flowers and an opportunity to visit the distinguished new wing of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Airy and light

This airy, light and spacious Jane and Justin Dart Wing is a 10,000-square-foot addition to La Mirada, and is so beautifully designed and crafted as to blend into its surroundings with the utmost architectural tact. The displays are well spaced, uncluttered, and well laid out for viewing.

Armin Hansen's dramatic large oils have enough elbow room to allow for individual appreciation; his fine collection of etchings are well lighted. The Oriental Collection is tastefully presented and described.

Into this surrounding was introduced the musical artistry of our own fine soprano Mary Margaret Graham and her excellent collaborator — Camille Oleata at the piano. Their choice of program material was serendipitous, echoing the delightful atmosphere of their special concert room.

First half

The first half of the recital consisted of songs sung in German, ranging from rippling Schubertian love songs through Mendelssohn's On Wings of Song and touching on Brahms, Richard Strauss and Dvorak.

Her three Schubert lieder included Seligkeit where her voice lightly described the joys of life in spirited fashion. Wohin rippled gently yet nimbly in a fine sensitive projection as did Auf dem Wasser zu Singen. Mendelssohn's familiar On Wings of Song was well controlled with much interpretive charm. The Schumann and Brahms lieder were darker and more abstractly serious. The moods were well captured but some difficulties were hinted at.

Then came Dvorak's Gypsy Melodies which Mrs. Graham projected in just the right spirited tone, with many flavorful rubatos and stylistic tastiness.

Polished awareness

Camille Oleata played Debussy's Clair de Lune with polished awareness, continuing and underlining her reputation as one of the Peninsula's finest pianists.

Songs in French by Faure and Fourdrain were charming, lightly vocalized, and lyrically expressive. The Faure songs were particularly appealing and the voice sounded fresh and freely produced.

Four very well expressed English songs closed the program with Who'll Buy My Lavender, making a very fine impression.

The experience of an afternoon which combined La Mirada's gracious past, fine traditions and atmosphere of good taste and gentleness with the very musicianly and equally gracious music making of Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Oleata is a memorable one.

I would hope that the Friends of La Mirada will offer more such special and enriching events.

Mixtlan, Nick Williams and the Monterey Dons, Samba Cruz, others.

After the parade — from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. — the annual free Big Little Backyard Barbecue and Entertainment Extravaganza will be held on the City Hall grounds. Vendors representing non-profit groups will sell barbecued ribs, "veggie burgers," chicken, so on.

The entertainment roster was designed to please a wide range of musical tastes: Monterey Community Band, Eight Second Ride, Santa Cruz Steel, House Jacks, Bow Williams Big Band with singer Linda Lukenas, The Charms, The Original Substitutes. Radio's Linda Cassidy will perform MC chores with TV personality Alan Richmond.

Kids of all ages will like the no-cost carnival booths and games. They'll see Uncle Sam on stilts as well as juggler Ken Martin.

Later there will be fireworks at Monterey Wharf. A word to the wise: City officials say traffic gridlock would cancel out future displays.

During that parade, don't forget to look for the Synchronized Realtor Briefcase Drill Team. Only in America.

Carmel Valley

Carmel Valley Youth Center (CVYC) invites all comers to attend a July 4 party from 2-4 p.m.

All who wish to do so may swim in the pool, enjoy park playtime and hear a jazz concert put together by Youth Music Monterey, now producing occasions as part of its annual Summer Jazz Camp at Robert Louis Stevenson School. According to CVYC, faculty and student musicians will join forces under the big band format.

The whole thing's free. Beverages and snacks will be available for purchase.

CVYC is located off Carmel Valley Rd. on Ford Rd. — just west of Carmel Valley Village.

And on Sunday, July 4, the Regional Park District will host a guided walk at Garland Ranch.

"The moderately paced hike will leave the Garland Park Visitor Center at 9:30 a.m. and return around noon," says spokesperson Nikki Nedeff. "Wear sturdy shoes and bring water. Children and leashed dogs are welcome."

Questions fielded if you call 659-6062.

Naval Postgraduate School

Monterey Bay Symphony will offer a no-cost outdoor pops concert at the campus on Monday, July 5 — a federal holiday.

The grounds will be open to the public for picnics during the rehearsal which begins at 10:30 a.m. Ice cream will be sold. The music will begin at 2 p.m.

Conducted by Jack Bayes and Carl Christensen, the program will celebrate Independence Day with lively and patriotic selections, including E.E. Bagley's National Emblem March and an Americana Medley arranged by Arthur Harris. Soprano Jackie Craighead will start things off with the national anthem.

This will be the second of three free outdoor pops concerts presented by Monterey Bay Symphony this summer. The third will happen on Labor Day at the same site. Information: 372-6276.

Pacific Grove

What's billed as an "all-city old-fashioned July 4 commemoration" is planned for "friends and neighbors" at the George Washington Park picnic area.

Starting at 11 a.m., there will be a patriotic program and special ceremony honoring veterans.

Right after that, there will be a picnic with lunches available at modest cost. Or participants are invited to bring their own food.

"Entertainment and music" will follow at 12:30 p.m. Planned with the youngsters in mind — "treasure hunt, eco-games, prizes."

Seaside

The 44th annual Seaside Parade of Champions will be preceded at 11:30 a.m. by a skydiving and parachute demonstration jump whose landing area will be in the vicinity of Fremont and Amador streets.

The parade itself will kick off at noon from Fremont and Birch. Leading will be the Seventh Infantry (Light) Division Continental Color Guard and the Infantry Band — "making their final appearance in the parade."

The many entries include a 75-member Filipino Youth Drum and Drill Team from Seattle. This unit is on a good will tour of Northern California.

After the parade, food booths will be open at Oldemeyer Center on Hilby. The parade awards ceremonies will start at 3 p.m.

Also, anticipated heavy use of Seaside State Beach on July 4 and the recent listing of the Snowy Plover as a threatened species have prompted the scheduling of a Beach Clean-Up Day on July 5.

The effort will start at 9 a.m. and continue until noon. Calling for it were Congressman Sam Farr, Monterey Dunes Natural History Association and State Parks and Recreation Department.

Participants will meet at the foot of Canyon del Rey in Seaside under the Adopt-A-Beach Banner. Litter and recycling bags will be provided, but people should bring their own gloves and sunscreen. Information: 384-7695.

Salinas

The eighth annual California Rodeo Chili Cook-off and Horseshoe tournament will be held Sunday, July 4, at the rodeo grounds. Gates will open at 11 a.m.

Activities include chili tasting, country dancing to the music of Tobacco Road, arm wrestling demonstrations, horseshoe contest, petting zoo, children's face painting, arts and crafts, Hole in One contest, produce booth, cowboy clown act (Peter Dracula), strongest hands competition.

Food and beverages will be available. Ticket information: 757-2951.

Out of immediate area

The San Jose America Festival will be held July 3-4-5 at Guadalupe River Park downtown. It's free and open to the public with more than 50 hours of music scheduled on two stages.

The entertainment roster includes Abhinaya Dance Company, San Jose Taiko, Vincente Amigo, Machete Ensemble, Living on the Edge, Los Lupenos, Coro Hispano de San Francisco, Ballet Asfaneh, Hellenic Traditional Arts Institute, Vital Information, The Edlos, Island Blend, Joe Ely, Pete Escovedo, many others.

Kidland will offer hands-on activities like clay totem building and weaving. On Sunday evening, July 4, there will be a large free fireworks display. Hotline: 1-662-7080.

Finally, the annual July 4 concert at Granite Rock's Wilson Quarry near Aromas will have the Watsonville Band, combined Monterey County and Santa Cruz County symphony orchestras, Joe Sharino Band, The Fabulous Drifters.

"A fireworks display finale will be accompanied by American patriotic music," organizers say.

Ticket orders: 800-696-4515.

Hillary's story

By DON DeNEVI

MANY IN this country are beginning to concur with Maureen Dowd of the New York Times, who says that Hillary Clinton is "the most empowered presidential wife in American history."

Yet few people, including her best friends, know the enigma beneath the persistently smiling persona.

Now, a new biography provides the interested with the first closeup of this exceedingly complex woman.

Although Hillary: Her True Story (Birch Lane Press; $19.95) by Norman King is a fine and thoughtful study, one wishes he had been privy to the more more meaty mechanisms that make her tick. Of course, King's omissions of Hillary's warts and wrinkles are not his fault. He can tell us only what she wants to be known, and few humans are willing to share their shadows.

Childhood

Nonetheless, the biography makes solid reading. The narrative begins with an exploration of Hillary's childhood in Park Ridge, Illinois, a Chicago suburb.

Her parents brought her up in a traditionally conservative, midwestern, middle-class family. Although Hillary's mom did not attend college, she was determined that all her kids, including her only daughter, would receive higher education.

Thus, Hillary attended Wellesley College, entering her freshman year as a Goldwater Republican and graduating as a supporter of Eugene McCarthy! She became president of College Government and became the first Wellesley student to address her own commencement.

Norman King, an international investment banker and author of 16 books, including eight biographies of such well-known celebrities as Princesses Di and Fergie, Madonna, Erma Bombeck, Dan Rather and Arsenio Hall, provides readers with numerous hitherto unknown intimate glimpses into the life of the First Lady.

Major reason

For example, a major reason that Hillary went to Yale rather than Harvard, and subsequently met Bill, was because a Harvard law professor told her that not only was Harvard a superior school but also that the Harvard Law School didn't need any more women. Also, when Hillary brought Bill home to meet her family, no one was impressed, including her two brothers.

As her mother commented, "We always had this picture of him as a barefoot hillbilly type." Then, before Hillary became fashion conscious, she seemed to care little about how she dressed and appeared.

Old item

At her initial appearance as First Lady of Arkansas in 1978, she wore an inauguration gown that turned out to be a redyed wedding dress. Although such tidbits make for interesting reading, we are left to decide how they add up to a personality.

Whether we believe in her, we must agree that Hillary Rodham Clinton has replaced Jackie Kennedy and Princess Diana as the most talked and written about woman in the world today.

She is the only First Lady to have an office in the West Wing of the White House, to play a deciding role in many of the President's major decisions (which she insists is exagerrated), to take command of one of the President's most important programs, including the toughest to implement — health care.

Yes, more than other heads of government such as Golda Meir and Margaret Thatcher, Hillary is on her way to becoming the most powerful woman in the world.

MONTEREY COUNTY Library sponsors a summer program with this theme: Together is Better — Let's Read.

The 1993 version began in mind-June and continues for seven weeks. Children of all ages may register to take part at any of the library branches and the bookmobile.

Children get a reading record booklet and stickers for books they read during the summer. They also have coloring sheets plus drawing and word-game activities. A certificate of achievement will be presented to each reader at program's end.

In addition to summer reading activities, many library branches have scheduled special programs throughout the summer for all age groups.

Shannon McMillan will be presenting songs and stories of the American West at seven libraries. SPCA spokesperson Carrie Cole will visit nine branches with live and puppet animals.

GroveMont Theater's fairy tale troupe will perform at 12 branches in August. For details, call the Carmel Valley branch.

THE SHOW Grease has been held over for two more performances at Monterey Peninsula College Amphitheater — July 2-3. Featured are Drew Christopher Lanning as Eugene and Nancy Kocher as Miss Lynch.

MILT AND Flo Williams have had their downtown Carmel location — Shop in the Garden on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh — for 35 years. Sculptor Milt makes metal mobiles that can hang indoors or out among the trees. This week, regular customers from Arizona brought in the above photograph taken at their Paradise Valley home. Monte and Karen Nowack were fascinated that the real live Mama Hummingbird built her nest atop one of Milt's stylized hummingbirds. "And," Flo adds, "there were two healthy eggs in that nesting place." (Karen Nowack photo)

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Upward and onward

THIS COLUMN broke the story several weeks ago. And now the whole thing's official.

The Alameda-based KJAZ Radio, which has a strong following hereabouts via the MPTV cable, on Wednesday became the KJAZ National Jazz Radio Network.

Facility owner Ron Cowen gave us the scoop during a telephone interview. Frankly, the situation looks bigger than what he revealed during preliminary stages.

Now, KJAZ — the oldest and only 24-hour commercial mainstream jazz station in the nation — is available nationwide via satellite to cable TV systems and radio affiliates. Spokesperson Bob Murphy describes all this as "a first for commercial jazz radio" and says cable systems in Virginia, Florida, Ohio and the San Francisco Bay Area already have inserted KJAZ "with additional systems signing up daily. We also will provide programming to local radio stations in exchange for shared advertising airtime."

A revolution?

In a move that "may well revolutionize jazz radio broadcasting," Murphy adds, "KJAZ has organized major stakeholders in the jazz and communications industries in support of this new radio network."

The "strategic alliance" involves KJAZ, jazz festival producer George Wein (selected fests and concerts will be covered live), International Association of Jazz Educators (IAJE), United Video Incorporated (UVI) and "a number of jazz record industry interests."

(KJAZ is on the third leg of a three-year broadcast contract with Monterey Jazz Festival. Both sides have told us that they're at work on a pact extension. One KJAZ executive said this week during another phone chat: "The jazz video part will be coming up shortly.")

The network began operations with a live broadcast from San Francisco — the Fairmont Hotel's Roof Garden. The news conference featuring various alliance members also was broadcast live.

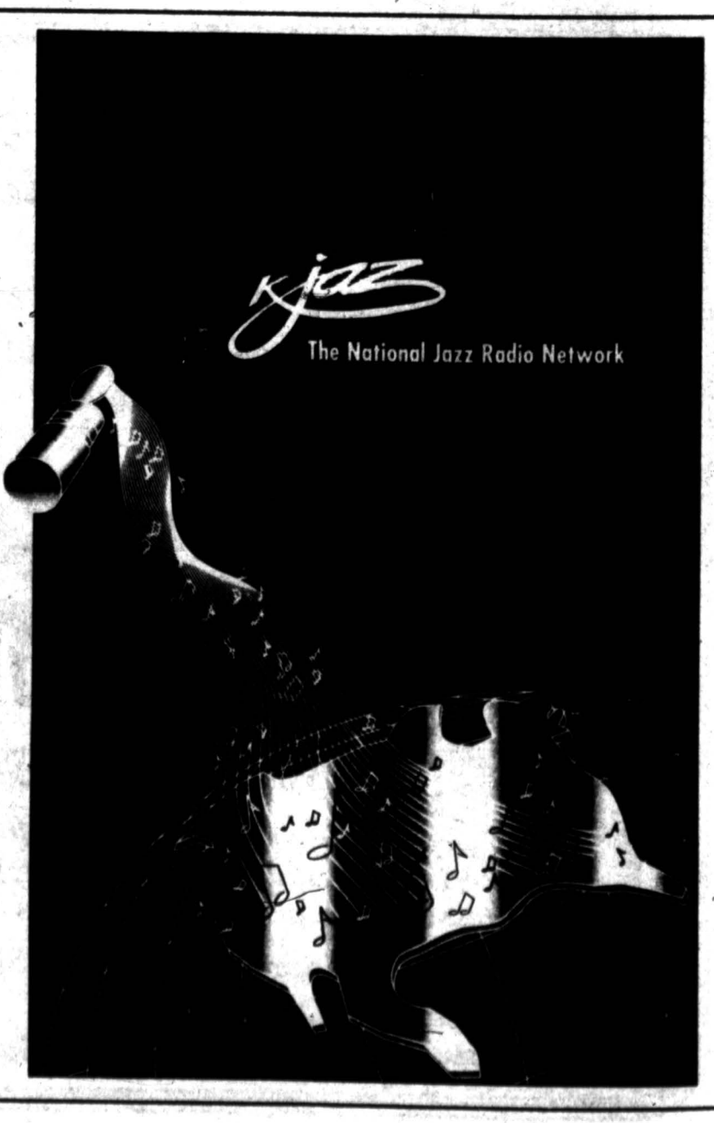
Wein spoke of the planned fest element: "This makes available to a national jazz audience unprecedented festival coverage."

IAJE spokespersons said the group will contribute "seminars and other educational formats." Said UVI President Jeff Treeman: "We see KJAZ National Radio Network as a natural precursor to the KJAZ Video Channel."

And KJAZ General Manager Tim Hodges: "A more informed and cohesive national jazz public — we estimate as many as seven million — is a natural consequence of the network."

How it works

The new transmission system utilizes digital fiber-optic lines to carry the KJAZ studio-quality stereo signal



Seaside tells dates and talent for free music series to Chicago. Then the signal is uplinked by UVI to the Galaxy 5 satellite.

Casting a transmission "footprint" that covers most of North America, the satellite then sends the signal back to earth. It then is available to any C-band satellite receiver aimed at Galaxy 5.

SAN FRANCISCO Jazz Festival (the 11th edition will be staged Oct. 29 to Nov. 14) reports some of the lineup: Joshua Redman Quartet with Pat Metheny, Cleo Laine doing a Duke Ellington program, Carla Bley/Steve Swallow Duo, David Murray Quartet featuring Amina Claudine Myers, clarinetist Don Byron, Steve Turre Shell Choir (the conch as musical instrument works well).

There also will be a tribute to great tenorman Joe Henderson. The resurrected Films of Ralph Gleason — late critic Gleason helped Jimmy Lyons found Monterey Jazz Festival and did TV jazz interviews of huge value — will be shown.

The complete schedule will be released at the fest press conference in September.

broadcaster over KNRY Radio) were joined by San Francisco deejay Eddie J. Flowers III (Garden Stage) and KKUP Radio blues programmer Leslie Ann McKnight (Night Club). Leslie and Eddie both brought style, tasteful brevity, real love for the music.

This edition was dedicated to the memory of Bill Jackson, jazz musician, sheriff's deputy and MBBF board member who died in May. He came up in a conversation with jazz bassist Norm Ross.

"I feel Bill's presence here," Norm said over our coffees in the Turf Club. "He worked so hard for all of this. I think he likes what's happening."

Amen.

Review/David Lynch series

The tragedy of Laura Palmer back via Bravo series

By JOHN DETRO

THIS HAUNTING series comes back at us these nights via the Bravo system. Even if you saw it before, the material deserves close looks.

Bravo spokespersons in Long Island tell me that episodes (28) will run through Dec. 26. The story advances on Friday evenings. Then this hour repeats on Sunday nights.

The complex tale centers on the murder of high school homecoming queen Laura Palmer. Kyle MacLachlan plays an FBI agent sent to take over the investigation from a willing and somewhat bemused sheriff.

TWIN PEAKS
Bravo cable channel
David Lynch overseeing a fine ensemble cast.
Rating: ★★★★

This fed is not only squeaky clean but downright odd, hanging from his feet as a morningtime exercise, obsessed with Marilyn Monroe's real relationship to the Kennedys, getting answers through dreams, praising good coffee and cherry pie as if these were the rarest of human doings. He's also a brilliant prober and observer of human nature.

There are no small roles in Twin Peaks — only players who spend more or less time on-screen. This is one of the finest ensembles ever gathered. Young Sherilyn Fenn, for example, portrays the spoiled and yet rejected daughter of a resort owner — her look of hatred and dismay over one more putdown hits the viewer like a punch in the gut.

At least one national magazine depicted Lynch as a monster at the worst and freak show proprietor at best. Anyone absorbing the "encore performances" will see that he's saying major stuff about the existence of evil in smalltown white America.

The sweet and popular Laura Palmer, it turns out, was a cocaine abuser and mentally troubled young woman who had sex with "at least three men" in the dozen hours before she died. A youthful biker loved her — and so did a middle aged psychiatrist. She could not resist the actual, specific, embodied darkness at the center of her life.

Surprised

We are surprised because Twin Peaks is beautiful and Laura Palmer from a well-off family. The tragic truth: Such horrors are commonplace in non-white poverty pockets. Evil thrives. Official moralists and the political overstructure exercise "benevolent neglect" until "nice white kids" get pulled in and start losing their minds and lives.

Dear God — the papers are full of the sickness. That rich man became the lover of his Miss America daughter. Today she heads a movement to get help for women who suffered similarly, and says too few folks came about the older victims.

My point: Lynch and this intricate impactful series don't play us cheap. He could be mentioned in the same breath (as a moral force) with writers Henry Miller and Samuel Beckett. Denial is the enemy and the dumb friend of evil; Lynch stumps for a terrible accuracy — not sensationalism.

So Twin Peaks is back. Much more than a freak show or cult series, it holds up a mirror. We can look, but will we see?

★ Forget it ★★ Fair ★★★ Good ★★★★ Excellent

STEPHEN SONDHEIM'S award-winning musical Sweeney Todd will open July 1 at Cabrillo Stage on the campus of Cabrillo College in Aptos.

CBS releases classic 'Honeymooners' tapes — Ralph, Alice, Norton and Trixie relived

By DON DeNEVI

REMEMBER RALPH and Alice, Norton and Trixie and how they made us roar with laughter? Who can forget? The humor, so simple, so honest, so full of love, was priceless. The Honeymooners came from another era, and for those of us who never missed an episode the series has been long lost and forgotten.

Now, CBS Video has announced the retail home video release of the entire collection of the "Classic 39" episodes. These are the only full-length Honeymooners episodes in existence since Jackie Gleason discontinued production after one historic broadcast season on the CBS TV Network.

These episodes will be presented on 20 volumes. Ten are now released while the remaining volumes will be released in October. (Check your favorite shop for costs.)

Says CBS Video General Manager Ken Ross: "Releasing the 39 was a labor of love for us and a tribute to the artistic genius of Jackie Gleason, Art Carney, Audrey Meadows and Joyce Randolph. Americans can now own the entire collection and watch and rewatch the episodes as they wish."

Art roundup

Carmel galleries now making Friday evenings special

ITS ALL "in the spirit of community," says Toni Jepson of Carmel Business Association (CBA).

Local art galleries and studios are making Friday evenings very special indeed from now through September.

Welcoming art lovers and collectors based around the world, more than 40 sites will be open from 6-9 p.m. Fridays for viewing, art seminars and festive gatherings.

"Carmel Art Walk," according to Jepson, "invites you to enjoy a variety of fine art as you stroll in the glow of a seaside sunset."

Each participating gallery and studio can easily be identified by the royal blue Carmel Art Walk banner. Brochures include a map showing each location; these are available if you call CBA at 624-2522.

Special events scheduled on Friday evening, July 2:

• Hanson Gallery (Ocean and San Carlos). From 7-8 p.m. Seminar on "unlimited edition mediums and the market."

• Rothe Gallery (Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh). From 6-9 p.m. "Continuous showing of a video — hands-on mezzotint method of painting by world master G.H. Rothe."

• Ann Cunningham Studio (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth). From 6:30-8:30. Watercolor demonstration.

• New Masters Gallery (Dolores between Ocean and Seventh). From 6-9. "Come meet famed aviation artist Stan Stokes."

THE ENTERPRISE has been established to "support and encourage genius." Gallery 21 of Carmel (east side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh) announces a grand opening champagne reception from 3-7 p.m. Saturday, July 3.

All comers will be able to meet "many of the artists" represented by this new venue.

Gallery 21 features original painings and the complete graphic works by Carmel's Eyvind Earle.

Also presented are paintings by local artists R.C. McClung, Yvone Gorman, Bruce Ricker, Melissa Lofton and Philip Horner, and sculpture of David Wagner and Nick Alexander.

Featured too — the "unique Egyptian wall fragments" of Richard Paul Gailey.

CARMEL'S CHERRY Center plans a public reception from 2:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday, July 3, to kick off its summer art exhibit.

The occasion will honor artists Timothy Doyle and Brigitte von Shaber. The show has been designed so that their contemporary works will complement paintings by the late Jeanne D'Orge, Cherry Foundation's founder.

The exhibit will continue through Aug. 25. It may be seen from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. Information: 624-7491.

D'Orge pieces have been chosen from an archival collection of more than 1,000 paintings and drawings she created between the time she took up the brushes at age 54 and her death (in 1964 at age 87).

Doyle's bronze sculptures will be in the main gallery. From Culver City, he often uses lightweight materials such as paper, foam, wood and plastics from which he casts without molds in the commercial foundry he runs with two others.

Von Shaber's paintings also have been shown at Pacific Grove Art Center and the State Capitol. British as well as California and Colombian collectors have invested in her work.

YOUNG PAINTER Paxton Mobley will have an exhibit at Pacific Grove's Portofino Coffee House from July 1-17.

"My art has always been a product of my surreal mind," Mobley says. "I have been influenced by Chirico, Dali, Ernst, Magritte and others of the Surrealist Movement."

The following two weeks will be devoted to the Fifth Annual Portofino Regulars and Friends Art Orgy.

THE MARITIME Museum of Monterey hosts an exhibit — Ships in Shadow Boxes — now through Aug. 15.

Program notes say shadow boxes are made by sailors worldwide and "depict a ship as it rides the waves when a good part of the hull is covered."

Adult admission is $5. Information: 373-2469.

WATERCOLORS BY students of Nancy Johnson will be shown throughout July in Carmel Foundation's Hallway Gallery, according to Ellen Castle of that site. The works include landscapes and seascapes.

THE CURRENT show at Monterey Airport brings us bridal gowns, accessories and photographs of wedding ceremonies from 1850-1950. Through Oct. 31.

Assembled from local collections — public and private — the exhibit is sponsored by the City of Monterey, Monterey History and Art Association Costume Collection and County Parks Department.

WATERCOLORIST DORIS Dyson will be featured during July at the Carmel Valley Manor show space.

SPOTLIGHTED AT the Doubletree Hotel's Venture Gallery throughout July — artist Katy Stoker.

MONTEREY PENINSULA Museum of Art offers a series of new exhibits:

Cristina Branch, Peggy Borgman, Willard Dixon, Deborah Eddy, Terry Hogan, Peter Loftus, William Rushton, Jerrold Turner, others. Work Gallery. Through Sept. 19.

• Keep It Dry — Rain and Snow Garments of Rural Asia. Small but select display of objects drawn primarily from the permanent collection. Rain capes, boots, hats, backpacks, shirts, snowshoes: all made from grasses and straws. Pacific Rim as well. Entry Gallery. Through Sept. 19.

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

by John Saar, Broker

Handling the Surprises!

Between the initial meeting of the minds and the final meeting at the settlement table, most real estate transactions encounter at least some breakdowns — often major ones. This is where having a professional handle the sale of your home makes a big difference.

Real estate professionals don't view breakdowns as problems, but as challenges to be met. Many are predictable, and by anticipating them we can minimize their consequences. We can draw on our own experience and that of our colleagues to ensure that, whatever happens, the buyers and sellers wind up with a successful settlement. When disputes arise, we use our expertise to create Win-Win situations. This approach to listing and selling real estate is what makes a difference to our buyers and sellers. We go the extra mile to make sure the countless details are handled and to keep our buyers and sellers informed about each aspect of their transaction.
